Warning to the reader

This book contains topics, concepts, and images that may be sensitive to some readers.

Throughout the work, the following are addressed:

• Philosophical and personal reflections

• Symbolic, spiritual, or religious interpretations

• Images obtained from various sources on the internet

• Visual content that may include creatures, fictional scenes, or cultural symbols

The purpose of this material is strictly narrative, illustrative, and reflective.

The author does not promote, advise, or encourage any inappropriate, dangerous, illegal, or unethical behavior.

The images used are presented in a contextual and non-sensationalist manner, seeking to support the conceptual narrative of the book.

Reading this material is recommended for a mature audience capable of interpreting the content in its artistic, symbolic, or speculative dimension.

Author's note

This book, Real Dragon Story, represents a personal exploration of ideas, symbols, and concepts that have accompanied my creative process.

Although some illustrations were obtained from various sources on the internet, the main focus of this work is the message and reflection behind each chapter.

My intention is not to present absolute truths, but to invite the reader to observe with an open mind, question, imagine, and reflect on that which transcends the everyday.

External images are used solely to complement the narrative and never with the intention of appropriating them. Their rights belong to their respective creators.

I deeply appreciate the time you have taken to read this book and accompany me on this creative journey.

I hope that what you find here inspires you, intrigues you, or invites you to look at the world from new perspectives.

REMEMBER TO TAKE IT EASY, IT'S JUST A HYPOTHESIS

WARNINGS

I must say that writing this book was embarrassing. The book is highly speculative. What you are about to read is the result of 11 years of study related to UFOs/UAVs and 5 years of analyzing pieces of Mexican archaeology. The more I learn and the more I understand about what happened in the past, the more I realize that our history is absurd, embarrassing, and ridiculous.

The book includes images of sexual relations depicted in archaeology.
One part of the book has questions and another part has answers.
It is worth mentioning that this book is heavily influenced by the traditions of the Abrahamic religions. I want you to know that what you are going to understand about the history of humanity becomes more and more irrational as you progress through the book.

Keep in mind that there may be errors of interpretation, chronology, logic, and continuity in this book. However, as in my videos, there is nothing in this book that cannot be supported by archaeology, sacred writings, or even science. The book may also become outdated as new studies are conducted and new conclusions are reached. Please note that this book has been written in parts, so it is not perfect. You have my permission to share this book, but you do not have my permission to say that you wrote it. This book was written in Bogotá, Colombia, in 2025. To contact the author, send a message to the user @realdragonstory on TikTok.

It was the beginning of the pandemic when I was scrolling through TikTok, and suddenly a video caught my attention. The video showed what appeared to be an alien being carved in stone, along with a bunch of strange symbols. The piece appeared to be Mexican and very old. And since the video was so different from the other videos on TikTok, I decided to go to this user's profile to find out a little more about what was going on.

This TikTok account had its own website, which was full of images and different sections. The page was in English and included details of the places where the pieces had been excavated. It also included what appeared to be a scientific study conducted by the University of Texas, which stated that the pieces could be between 8,000 and 12,000 years old.

For that reason, I decided to make a backup of those thousands and thousands of images because I felt that the website would be taken down

The mystery overwhelmed me; it was too much information, and for that reason, I spent a long time classifying the images into categories, trying to find patterns or something that would help explain a little of what I was seeing. The pieces were found in Mexico.

And to that we must add a small aggravating factor... There were more users on different social networks uploading more and more content, and every week new pieces were found, with new information and other pieces made of different materials and sizes.

At first, I used software to organize the images, but the software duplicated the images several times, making the task even more difficult. So I had to organize the information by hand, image by image, deleting the images that were already duplicates.

What do subscribers say?

There are various opinions on the internet about this. Some say it's too good to be true. Others simply dismiss the pieces as fake, and indeed some pieces are counterfeit. Others seek to profit from the pieces and upload them to websites such as eBay, looking for customers to sell them to. Most viewers are simply not interested in the subject and move on, preferring to watch women dance on TikTok or see people humiliate themselves to get a rose in a live event.

The sad reality in Latin America is that we lack a lot of education. It is incredible that the Russians took an interest in this subject before the Mexicans themselves. The Russians went to explore first, and then the Americans came to do the same, taking pieces and conducting studies and analyses.

Something else I want to highlight is that there are people who are too skeptical and will not accept the truth no matter what the scientific evidence, studies, analyses, and obvious conclusions are. For them, the immense number of pieces that have been found is worthless.

It is important to mention that there are people who know that this is real, and they are people who have already made decisions.... I mean that there are people whose sole purpose is to confuse others.

Why does this happen? Because there are people who are absolutely devoted to evil, to doing evil, to Satanism. At some point, you will have to realize that you live in a world where there is a constant struggle between good and evil. And that is why there are people (whether they call themselves scientists or experts) who will do everything possible to prevent others from waking up and freeing themselves from this oppressive system in which we live.

And don't forget the bots... yes, bots, robots programmed to comment in order to encourage or censor a topic. The internet is full of bots, and TikTok does a great job of filtering their comments.

Chapter 1 - Something is wrong with the world

Hunger, wars, lack of healthcare services. Lack of education, unemployment, poverty, the gap between rich and poor. The suppression of innovative technologies. Pollution. The destruction of the environment, the erratic behavior of animals, and the list goes on and on.

If you've been paying attention, you'll have noticed that the world isn't working as it should.

In some countries, you can't go out on the street without worrying about being mugged by thieves. I wonder... How did we get to this point? ... Have humans always behaved this way? Or is there something else?....

Surely there are parts of human history that we do not know about, and that information has been censored for the vast majority of human beings. The way to find the truth about this world is through education. If you want to discover the secrets of our history, then you must study archaeology and genetics.

As incredible as it may seem, everything has an explanation. But I must warn you that the explanation is more complicated than you can imagine

At first, it seems impossible to find an explanation for the great mysteries related to:

- Elongated skulls in Peru, Egypt, Mexico, and the United States
- The Nazca Lines in Peru
- Göbekli Tepe in Turkey
- Gunanpadam
- Karaltepe in Turkey
- Oyaitatambo in Peru
- Chichen Itza in Mexico
- The cave paintings of Tassili n'Ajjer and Jabareen in Algeria
- The cave paintings of Australia
- The Utah carvings in the United States
- The testimonies of various African tribes about unexplained events.
- The knowledge of the Dogon tribe in Africa about the existence of the star Sirius B

Chapter 2 - Detecting Lies

Before I begin to explain the secrets of this world, I must give you a warning. There is a lot of information out there, and not all of the information you find on the internet is true. In fact, most of the information available is false, incomplete, or comes from unreliable sources.

The most important skill every man must have is the ability to distinguish truth from falsehood. That is the basis of all practical and useful knowledge.

You must question the validity of information and check whether the evidence matches the facts. The worst thing that can happen to a man is to be gullible. A gullible person is someone who accepts the world as it is presented to them, without questioning, criticizing, or doubting, and therefore without reasoning.

Without critical thinking, there are only conjectures and false perceptions.

How serious is this?

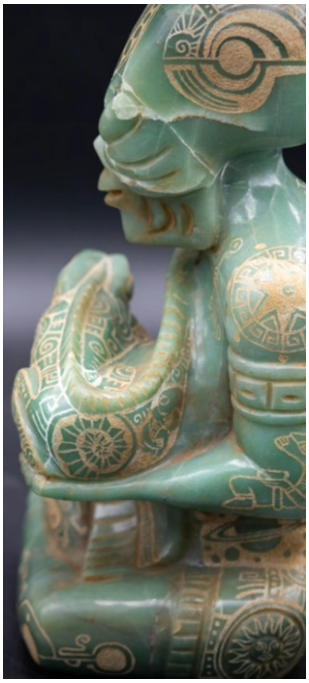
Imagine a doctor who is unable to find the cause of an illness and instead prescribes something that will do the patient more harm. Don't you think that's stupid? And yet there are 8 billion human beings with perception problems, a lack of critical thinking, and a lack of interest in solving the mysteries of the past.

Disclaimer

I am going to share several important secrets about this world with you, but what you are about to learn is difficult to accept. There is no turning back. If you like the comfortable life you lead, then my recommendation is that you delete this book from your files.

After reading this book, you will never see the world in the same way again.

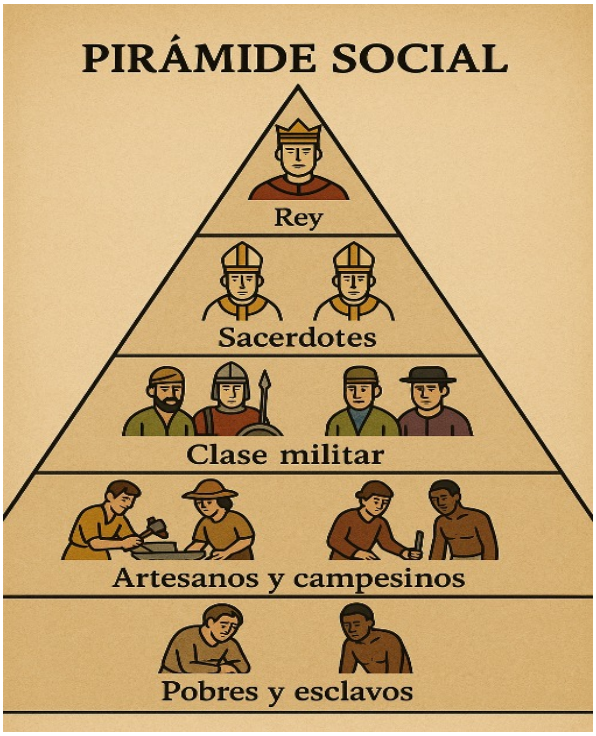
Let's take it step by step... from the general to the specific..



Chapter 3 – The Tangle of Religions, Gods, and Texts

There are too many religions, too many sacred texts, too many cultures, too many countries, too many histories. But they all have the same origin, and most of them are systems of control.

From the little information we have about the history of different cultures, there is one common element that stands out above the rest... Hierarchies. In all cultures, we can find different social positions, as if they were a pyramid.



The curious thing is that regardless of the culture or civilization you look at, you will find that this social order is maintained time and time again. So what changes? What varies from one culture to another? (Not counting technological advances or skin color...) What varies is the belief system that forms the basis of laws, behaviors, and positions of power.

If you have analyzed this calmly, you will have noticed that many kings, governors, and emperors always claimed to possess the “divine right” to rule because they were the representatives of “God” (or gods) on earth. Kings said that their blood was different and claimed that they were the direct descendants of these gods.

As incredible as it may seem, the British royal family can trace its genealogy back to the Norse gods... (ridiculous, I know... but true nonetheless).

It is likely that their desire for power and control over others led them to justify their claims of “being the children of the gods”... or perhaps there is something more... perhaps there is some truth in these claims...

Let's recap a little... Chinese emperors claimed to be descended from the great Yellow Emperor who descended from heaven on a great dragon (according to their accounts). The Pharaohs claimed to be direct descendants of the sun god Ra. The Vikings descended from Odin. The Greeks attributed their heroes, kings, and demigods to the descendants that the god Zeus had with multiple princesses around the Aegean Sea.
It is likely that their desire for power and control over others led them to justify their claims of “being the children of the gods”... or perhaps there is something more... perhaps there is some truth in these claims...

And so on and so forth, all cultures have this element of... “the gods”... or God, as an explanation for the origins of man and his social position. In India, the caste system still exists and defines the entire life of its inhabitants.

In any case, the hierarchical system remains, but beliefs change, and change drastically. Religious texts full of fables, tales, fantasies, legends that are impossible and inexplicable to science, contain stories about a lot of wars, revenge, plots, subplots, and nonsense that lead nowhere.

But the customs and rituals that were generated during those periods of time remained for centuries, until finally the civilizations collapsed. Then new civilizations began with new beliefs and new religious texts.

But... The same hierarchies survive and remain in place. Why does this happen?

Is it simply a way of organizing ourselves? Is it mass psychological behavior? Is it the natural order of things? Or is there something else?

Part 1. The first truth you need to know...

You have a problem with your eyes.

I am going to state some basic truths that you need to know.

1) You have a problem with your eyes.
2) Resources are needed to understand the truth.
3) History is not as you have been told.
4) Religion is fundamental to understanding what is happening.
5) Not all sources of information are reliable.
6) You can ignore the truth, but the truth will not ignore you.

Listen to me... you don't see the world as it really is... All you see is your perception of the world.

What do I mean by this?

You don't see all the spectrums of light. You can't see ultraviolet light, nor can you see infrared light, and what's more, there may be other dimensions of light that you can't see.

And the problem repeats itself... There are many sounds with decibels so low or so high that your ear cannot pick them up.

There are smells that your nose cannot perceive, and the greater the distance between your nose and the object, the less ability you have to perceive its properties.

What am I getting at with all this?

I want you to understand that your senses are limited. Your brain recreates reality with the little information available. It reconstructs and interprets everything that is happening around you and from there begins to formulate more or less valid assumptions to explain reality. With these assumptions, your brain makes unconscious predictions to keep you alive.

How skilled is your body really?

How many years does it take you to understand that your hands move faster than your eyes can register? (Perception problems are the secret behind many magic tricks).

So... if your body is limited and your senses can be easily deceived... then how can we distinguish the truth?

Resources are needed to understand the truth.

Here's another bucket of cold water...

A malnourished mind cannot analyze the truth. In countries suffering from malnutrition, where people are starving due to lack of food, these are the countries least likely to find the truth.

In such a competitive world, malnutrition is a critical factor that separates the rich from the poor. A child's mind is developing, as is a teenager's mind. But both children and teenagers need good nutrition if they want their brains to develop the mechanisms of logic and analysis (vital for critical thinking).

How do you expect to learn the truth if you have cognitive problems? And worse still... How do you teach the truth to a group of people who suffered from malnutrition in their childhood? (Latin America...)

Not to mention access to information, healthcare, and education. How can you expect to learn the truth about this world if you live malnourished, sick, and in a village cut off from all digital and printed knowledge? (Information is easily accessible in large cities.)

If you are sick, you cannot reason; if you are malnourished, you cannot deduce; and without the skills to read and write, you cannot question the veracity of information. Furthermore, the lack of information about science, physics, mathematics, history, and general culture harms people because it puts them in fragile and dangerous positions. They have to resort to “experts” to validate their information.

In other words, the sicker you are, the hungrier you are, and the more ignorant you are, the more dependent you become on others, and thus you become easily manipulated and weak.

History is not as you have been told

Every so often, “the facts” change.

It was once believed that the earth was flat, that the earth was the center of the universe, that time was constant, that culture originated in Europe, and the list goes on and on.

Do you know how many times the age of the universe has been changed? How many times has the narrative been changed?

Did you know that Sigmund Freud used cocaine and that it was not considered a bad thing at the time?

Every so often, “science” tells you what is right and what is wrong. What is considered acceptable today... may be considered an insult tomorrow.

Science has a big problem, which is that it is constantly changing; it is not permanent. Chronology, postulates, and “facts” change as new discoveries or new studies appear that disprove previously established rules. Don't get me wrong, I am in favor of science, but of a more collaborative science, a more practical and less censored science.
What we have today is a half-baked science.

Remember also that science has been censored in the past. Flexiglass had already been discovered in ancient times but was hidden for economic reasons. The same is true of the invention of Electric cars powered by water engines. Many inventions have been censored and will be censored in the future to protect economic, political, and even religious interests.

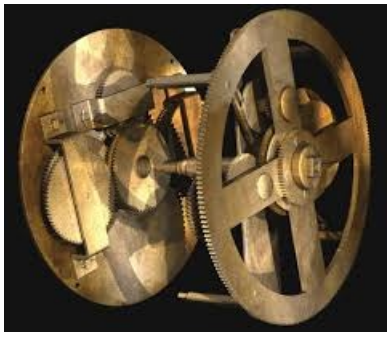
The problem of ooparts (out of place artifacts).

Archeology faces a major problem: “out-of-place artifacts,” you know, those objects that don't fit in with the pile of lies they tell you.

First, they tell you that the Greeks were an ancient civilization that fought with swords and shields. According to historians, they didn't have much technological development. Then they find the “Antikythera mechanism” and bam... suddenly the Greeks were more advanced than we thought...

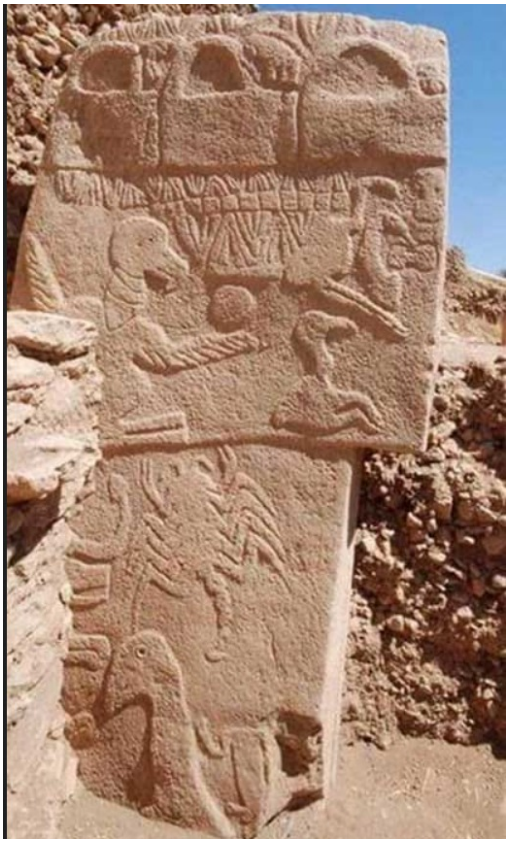


Then they tell you that the pyramids are 4,585 years old... until a geologist comes to study the Sphinx and realizes that there is sediment and wear caused by water. Which means that the pyramids could be up to 12,000 years old.

And so it goes... Remember the Baghdad battery? A vessel containing copper and iron elements dating from between 250 BC and 250 AD has been speculated to have served as a rudimentary electric battery. But they are not entirely sure.

Not to mention the Saqqara bird, a wooden figure dating back to 200 BC that some consider to be a model airplane or glider.

Let's go even further and visit the ruins of Göbekli Tepe in Turkey, dated approximately between 9600 and 8200 BC, which is around 11,600 years old. If you look closely, important questions begin to arise.



Why do the statues at Göbekli Tepe clearly show the same bags carried by the Sumerian gods? There are also representations of animals, snakes, and jaguars. Why did they stop excavating at Göbekli Tepe and plant trees around the site?

They know that as the roots of those trees grow, they could damage what lies beneath this archaeological site, and yet they continue to plant trees there.

Let's be more extreme. The Louvre Museum website shows the cylinders recovered from Ashurbanipal's library. These cylinders with cuneiform writing clearly show the Egyptian gods... even the museum's own description of the cylinders details them as follows... God Ra next to Enlil... (How is it possible that the Egyptian gods are represented in Sumerian culture?) Aren't the Sumerians supposed to have existed long before Egyptian civilization? And why do they show the same gods? It doesn't make sense... something doesn't add up...

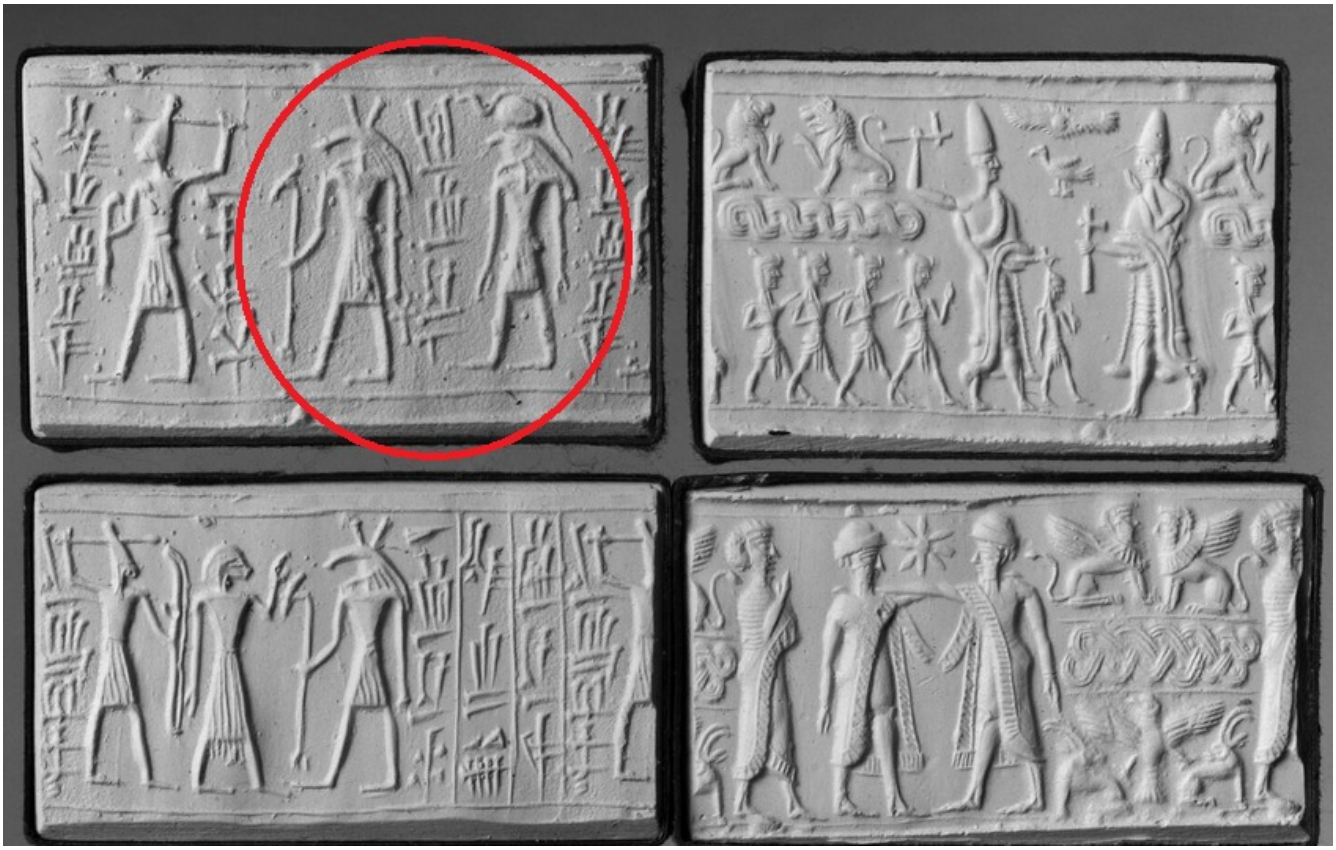
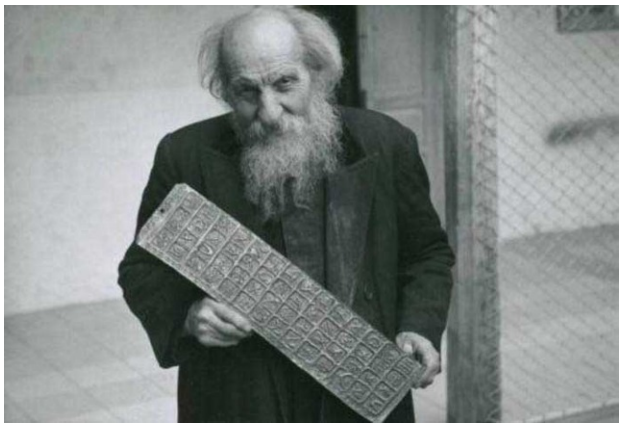
https://collections.louvre.fr/en/ark:/53355/cl010147095



The stem factor.



More cases where the timeline doesn't add up. In 1923, Father Crespi, of Italian origin, was sent by Pope Pius XI on a mission to Quito, Ecuador, where he was to recover indigenous artifacts and bring them back to the Vatican. Father Crespi established a relationship with the Shuar tribe, famous for their practice of head shrinking (I wonder who taught this indigenous tribe that practice). They gave him some gold plates and other artifacts that were found in the famous cave of the stems.

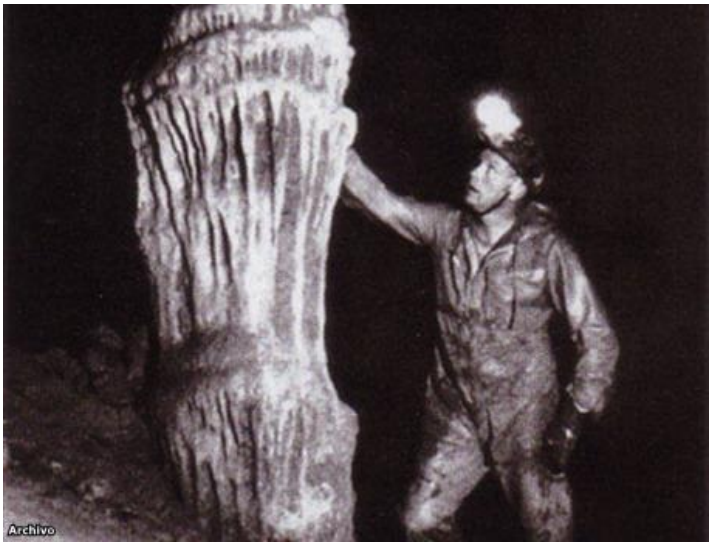
Father Crespi, an intelligent man (with a good education), quickly realized the immense value of these pieces. He soon realized that something was wrong. The pieces clearly showed the art of Sumerian culture as well as Egyptian art.

The same gods; the same statues; in the same positions. How could this be possible?

He wondered to himself as he contemplated the immense musical instruments that accompanied these artifacts.

Statues, golden plates, engravings with strange inscriptions, guitars, and even a golden crown. All of this was given to Father Crespi by the Shuar tribe. When he asked them about the origin of these relics, the Shuar replied that they had taken these pieces from inside a pyramid located inside the cave of the stems.

A pyramid inside a cave? That sounds unlikely, but he believed them because of the number of pieces the Shuar gave him. The case of the cave of the stems attracted international attention. The news soon reached the ears of the high command. An expedition went to visit that remote site.



EThis expedition was led by none other than Neil Armstrong himself (1976). The first man to walk on the moon found a greater mystery in those caves than what he saw in outer space.

For better or worse, that expedition was not successful, and nothing new was extracted, or at least that was what was reported to the media. Who knows what objects may have been recovered?

Subsequent expeditions would reveal the depth and extent of these caves, which stretch for miles and miles of underground passages that have not been fully explored.

What happened next? What did Father Crespi do with all the material he collected? He created a museum with all the pieces. Journalists took photos of the artifacts and corroborated the case. Everything was going well until one night when a strange fire destroyed the place, destroying many pieces and burning the evidence of an unusual story.

explored from a distant past whose history has been lost in the mists of time. (or at least that's what they believe)

From the few remains left on the ruins of the museum, an unexpected buyer appeared. The Central Bank of Ecuador offered to buy the remaining pieces for a ridiculously low price. Censoring the fate of these pieces by hiding them in their private vaults.

Thus died Father Crespi, frustrated and cheated, knowing that he had been part of something great, something that could have been a turning point in the history of humanity. If it weren't for the work of journalists at the time, Father Crespi's work would have been lost forever, becoming just another fairy tale.

Disclaimer II

Don't be impatient, reader; please keep in mind that I will eventually use all the stories I have mentioned in this book to offer a more complete explanation of what is happening in this world. But before I get to that explanation, I want to offer a more complete picture to provide a broader context

The great fountain in Bolivia

Of all the out-of-place artifacts, the following case is one of the most inexplicable to date. One fine day, a Bolivian farmer came across something buried near the village of Chua on the shores of Lake Titicaca. It looked like some kind of ancient clay cup. Nothing unusual at first glance. Just some pre-Columbian pottery buried by an indigenous person in ancient times.

Upon examining the clay vessel, he realized that it had strange triangular scribbles inscribed on it with some straight lines that appeared to be an ancient writing system. Historians and expert linguists say that this vessel contained graphemes similar to the Proto-Sumerian writing system.

How could this be possible? How could engravings and symbols belonging to a culture so distant from Bolivia have been found there? Could this vessel have crossed the Atlantic from Iran to Bolivia before Christopher Columbus arrived? Could it be possible that in the distant past, both cultures (the Sumerian and the indigenous Bolivian) had exchanged pieces, or is there something else in the story? Something we have not been able to decipher?

With the large amount of evidence available globally, we dare to formulate a hypothesis that will gradually provide an explanation (somewhat strange and reasonable).

The Australian Pharaoh

Not long ago, a unique and little-known case came to light. In the middle of the Australian jungle, a series of unmistakably Egyptian engravings came to the attention of the archaeological community. These pictograms showed what at first glance appeared to be a pharaoh in an Egyptian boat. Next to those engravings, the figure of the jackal god Anubis was present.

The case came to the attention of the History Channel, who did not hesitate to send an “expert.” According to the television crew, the engravings told the story of a pair of brothers who had traveled in ancient times from Egypt to Australia. The channel claimed that such cultural exchange could have been possible. It is still a rare and peculiar case... but let's continue...

The Gosford Hieroglyphs (also known as the Kariong Glyphs) are a set of approximately 300 Egyptian-style hieroglyphs located in Kariong, Australia. These hieroglyphs are found on a sandstone outcrop in the Gosford region of New South Wales, within the Brisbane Water National Park.According to modern archaeologists, the engravings are recent and fake, but we have no way of corroborating or refuting these claims.

The Grand Canyon of Colorado.

Aside from being one of the most popular tourist destinations in the United States, the Grand Canyon holds many unsolved mysteries and raises more than a few questions.

Clarence Edward Dutton (1841–1912) was an American geologist and army officer who worked for the United States Geological Survey (USGS) and was a close collaborator of John Wesley Powell, the famous explorer of the Grand Canyon. In 1882, Dutton published a detailed geological study entitled Tertiary History of the Grand Canyon District, which is considered one of the most important and classic works on the geology and history of the Grand Canyon.

Dutton had a great appreciation for the beauty and importance of the Grand Canyon, and believed that its names should reflect the grandeur and cultural diversity of the world. Therefore, he chose names inspired by mythologies, legends, and cultures from different parts of the planet for the canyon's landmarks. Thus, many places bear names such as Wotan's Throne (Norse mythology), the Pyramid of Cheops (Egypt), the Temple of Buddha (Buddhism), the Temple of Solomon (Judeo-Christian tradition), the Temple of Jupiter (Roman mythology), and the Tower of Ra (Egyptian mythology).

This practice was a way of paying tribute to the universality and majesty of the landscape, giving it an almost sacred and multidimensional character that goes beyond the merely geological.
Did you know that there are places that have been reported as off-limits to the general public (such as caves and crevices)? Many so-called “amateur archaeologists” or explorers and hikers attest to their encounters with soldiers who protect these areas and deny public access to them.

Why are there places in the Grand Canyon that are off-limits to the public? And don't bother asking the AI because it won't tell you that these encounters with the military are real...

The tomb of the Pharaoh.

In the 1990s, German toxicologist Svetlana Balabanova and her team analyzed Egyptian mummies (including the famous one from the 21st dynasty called Henut Taui).

They found traces of nicotine and cocaine in the hair and tissues of these mummies. The result was surprising because coca (Erythroxylum coca) and tobacco (Nicotiana tabacum) are plants native to America and, in theory, did not exist in the Old World in Pharaonic times.

Erythroxylum coca is found in Bolivia and Peru, while Erythroxylum novogranatense comes from Colombia and Ecuador.

Somehow, a long time ago, and even though scientists don't want to admit it, the truth is that ancient cultures were already connected to each other, even long before Columbus arrived in America.

Gobleki Tepe

Göbekli Tepe is located in southeastern Turkey, about 15 kilometers northeast of the city of Şanlıurfa (ancient Urfa or Edessa), near the Syrian border.

There, a series of archaeological discoveries have become quite famous in both the scientific community and the conspiracy community.

We are talking about a series of pillars dating back between 8,000 and 12,000 years. Once again, the official chronology of that false narrative that they try to sell us as “official history,” in which we were told that Sumerian civilization was the first to emerge, has been altered.

It has gotten out of hand. If their plan was to cover everything up and try to hide the evidence of their false narrative, I must say that it is too late; the public has already begun to question everything they know about human history.

The site has become a tourist attraction, drawing all kinds of thinkers, academics, and professionals fascinated by the mystery.

Among them is the researcher (for some, pseudo-scientist) named Graham Hancock, whose film crew made a documentary for Netflix called “The Apocalypses of the Past.”

If I remember correctly, in episode 5 of season 1, at minute 30 of the episode called “The Legacy of the Wise” of that docu-series, the remains of Gobleki Tepe are shown.

Despite Hancock's subjective attempts to explain the logic behind these pillars, I must admit that he hit the nail on the head when he began to mention something that had caught his attention

(The constant presence of representations of “snakes” in many of the sculptures around the temple.

Although Graham believed this was because the inhabitants of that place wanted to warn of the presence and dangers associated with snakes near the site, it is worth mentioning that this “detail,” although seemingly minor, will become a fundamental piece later on.

As far as I understand, excavations at Gobekli Tepe have ceased. Instead, trees have been planted around the site to protect it from unwanted visitors and to ensure its future preservation.

Can you believe the pile of lies they've told to justify such a belated cover-up?

I heard that the World Economic Forum has been there and has taken steps to ensure that the investigations do not go any further than they should.

As I mentioned earlier, it is already too late. A major detail came to light during the excavations at Göbekli Tepe. “The presence of the famous bags.”

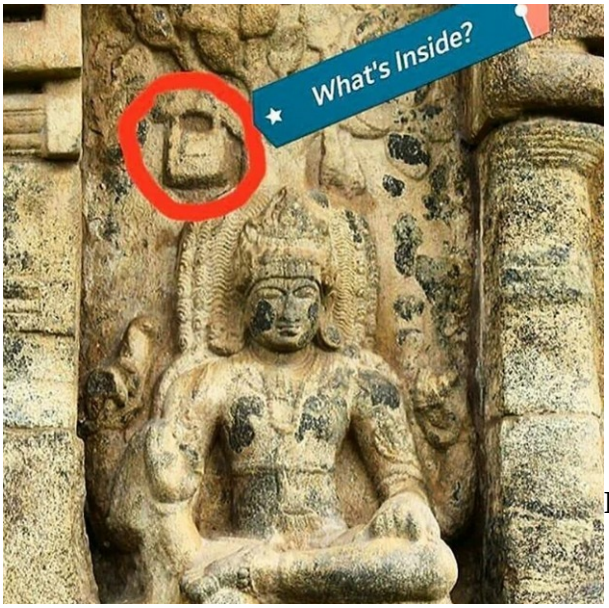
Sumerian bags are NOT so Sumerian

The patterns repeat themselves and the lies become evident. What connection could Turkey have with the ancient Sumerian civilization? What connection does Mayan culture have with the cradle of civilization?

The answer... the element of the bags.

In the official narrative, Sumerian bags are nothing more than buckets filled with water to irrigate the tree of life, but... is that really the case?

What if bags were something more? What if bags had a deeper meaning and significance? They must have played an important role, considering that such bags are found in most ancient cultures.



El

pyramidal problem

Another factor that is constantly repeated is the presence of pyramids and megalithic constructions around the world. I was surprised to discover that Sudan has more pyramids than Egypt.

EGIPTO MEXICO CHINA

I can imagine the look of surprise on the Spaniards' faces when they came across the Mayan cities and their imposing temples. When they arrived at Puma Punku in Bolivia, the first thing they did was ask the locals about the stone constructions.

How did they lift those stone slabs? Why did they lift them?

The natives replied... “Those stones were already here before we arrived.”

And when they saw the Gate of the Sun in Tiahuanaco, the Spaniards asked, “What is that and who is represented there?” The locals replied:

“That is the god Viracocha, father of all humanity.” (Obviously this is not true, but that is what they believed.)

It is rare to find megalithic stones scattered on the ground, but it is even rarer to find entire buildings made of megalithic stones..

Much has already been said about the Great Pyramid of Giza. That it is perfectly aligned with the north of the earth, that it has a perfect angle, that the summer solstice, that the equinoxes, that its enormous blocks, that the blocks came from Aswan, that they were tombs for the pharaohs, that they were power plants, that the tip of the pyramid was lost, that it is impossible to have been built in 20 years, that there are secret chambers that have not been found, that the three pyramids are perfectly aligned with the constellation of Orion, that the Great Pyramid was a water pump that transmitted pulses and the quartz that covered it produced electricity with those pulses, that the pyramidal shape preserves fruit. Etc. Etc.

Up to that point, the mystery of the pyramid was something local, but it becomes something international when you realize that:

Pyramids in Bosnia.

Pyramids in China.

Pyramids on dollar bills next to a message that says "In God we trust" is all well and good, but which "God" do we trust?

Let's recap some easily observable conclusions:

1) The chronology and history of civilizations have constantly changed as new evidence and new methods for dating archaeological discoveries have emerged.

2) The presence of Sumerian and Egyptian elements in America opens up the possibility of the existence of global civilizations in ancient times (or at least that American cultures were influenced by the same factors that influenced the cultures of the ancient continent).

3) Constant cover-ups by the military have ensured that history as we know it "remains censored," and the vast amount of misinformation in the media suggests the presence of interests on the part of the government and other powerful groups to redirect society toward false conclusions

Don't believe me? Google "padlock-shaped tombs in Osaka and Sakai" and ask yourself why these tombs are not accessible to the public or researchers.

Because a promise is a promise, I'm going to give you all the answers in this book. But first, I'm going to give you a little context so you can understand where these conclusions come from.

CONTEXT

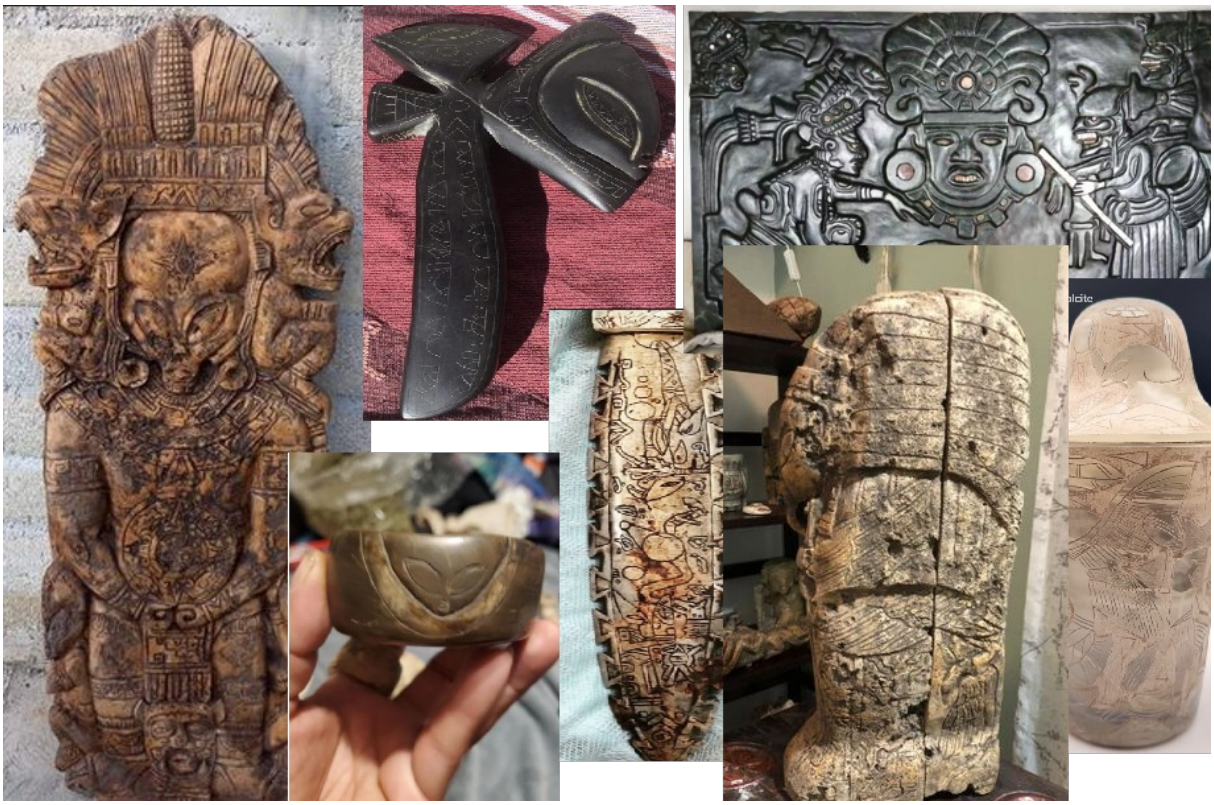
Since 1944, excavations have been carried out in Mexico, revealing many artifacts and remains of pre-Columbian culture. Some of these pieces ended up in museums. Others ended up in private collections.

Many of these pieces remained undiscovered until 2015, and since then, several Mexican and international teams have ventured into the mountains and areas surrounding towns and monuments in the hope of finding more pieces from the Mayan culture and other earlier and unknown cultures.

Thanks to current technology, the work of exploring the land has become easier. However, it is not a perfect technique. Ground-penetrating radar equipment and new technologies provide clues as to which sites are most likely to contain such pieces buried under sediment.

What has been found? What does the INAH say? What has happened in the last 10 years?.... And what is the current situation?

The following have been found:



• Statues (of various sizes)
• Carved walls
• Quartz skulls
• Knives
• Axes
• Carved plates
• Vases
• Pots
• All kinds of stone crafts
• Sarcophagi (if sarcophagi)
• Animal bones and remains
• Carved bones
• Carved seashells
• Cave paintings and mural paintings.

How many pieces have been found: more than 3,000 pieces of all types, sizes, shapes, and materials, according to the latest data. Some pieces are 40,000 years old O__o

What does the INAH (National Institute of Anthropology and History) say? The Mexican regulatory body

/: “All these pieces are fake because they show extraterrestrial beings blah blah blah.”
What has happened in the last 10 years?

At first, farmers from different areas took the pieces to the INAH, which said that it would receive them and keep them in a safe place so that they could be preserved, and that any resident could go and look at the pieces if they requested to do so. However, after the pieces were handed over, the INAH said that those pieces were never in its inventory. When the residents realized that the INAH was trying to deceive them, they showed the papers and receipts provided by the INAH itself, leaving them with no choice but to admit that the pieces had been “lost.” Some time later, the residents learned that the pieces had ended up in the home of a politician, who had resold them to the highest bidder. A foreign buyer had taken an interest in them, offering a good amount of money to obtain the pieces.

The consequences... Since then (and I'm talking about 2015 to the present), amateur archaeologists/residents...

or peasants no longer have any connection with the INAH, the pieces are in private collections. They are in the homes of villagers or in large villas. The pieces are offered for sale and are available to the highest bidder (in most cases they are bought by Americans or Masonic lodges).

Hundreds and hundreds of pieces are found in the homes of both poor and rich people. Other pieces were sold to people in the United States, and still others were taken by the Russians when they went to Mexico to conduct excavations. But the vast majority of pieces remain in Mexico.

What else does the INAH say?

The INAH says that anything depicting an extraterrestrial being must be considered modern and contemporary, and therefore cannot be authentic, much less considered national heritage.

This explains why these pieces have been able to leave Mexico without causing much of a stir. For the customs office, these pieces should not be considered authentic but, at most, should be seen as just another souvenir, to which little attention should be paid.

What has happened with the analysis of the pieces?

Everything... hahahaha

The Americans took some pieces to the University of Texas to determine their age. The results show ranges from 12,000 to 8,000 years old, according to carbon-14 tests applied to the “adhesives” that bind and compose the pieces.

The Russians tried to decipher the inscriptions and language carved into the pieces. They compared it to the letters of the ancient Magyar script in Hungary or something like that... according to the Russians, the inscriptions tell of Ra, a powerful warrior who defeated his enemies... On television

A couple of pieces made it onto television, on the program about ancient aliens. Only two of them were shown, and they weren't given much context nor did they contribute much to the conversation, but at least they made an appearance on television.

On social media:
On Pinterest, Instagram, Facebook, and TikTok, you can find Mexican pieces, and not only Mexican ones, but also pieces from other countries with common elements. I will not mention the associated accounts to avoid the closure or censorship of these invaluable accounts. What I can tell you is that with a little curiosity, you can easily find them yourself.

All right, that's all well and good, but... where are you going with all this?

To tell you that we now have answers, answers to the greatest mysteries of antiquity! Perhaps they are subjective answers, perhaps not. But at last we have answers! And with them come new questions? Better questions and a broader view of the world in which you live.

Answers

How were the conclusions you will read in this book reached?

The first step was to gather information. This involved observing, storing, and categorizing the archaeological pieces found in Mexico according to the information each piece provided.

After analyzing thousands and thousands of pieces (which took a considerable amount of time and a lot of space on my hard drive), I had to put the information into different folders or categories. For now, the categories are as follows (in no particular order):

ADN	Ajedrez	Alíen	Alquimia	Ank	Anubis	Anunaki	Árbol
Astronauta	Bastón	Bolso	Calavera	Calendario	Chac Mool	Códices Mayas	Cofre
Conchas	Crucifixión	Cutulhu	Dar a luz por la boca	Decapitaciones	Dragón	Escarabajo	Escritura
Esfinge	Estrella de David	Faraón	Fluorescencia	Gatos	Gigantes	Gobekli tepe	Híbridos
Demonios	Hijos de Satanás	Huevos	Ingeniero	Joyería	Mapa	Mascara	Masonería
Mujer	Musica	Nave	Espacial	Obelisco	Ojo que todo lo ve	Orbe	Ouija
Pasado indígena	Paternidad	Perú	Pirámides	Planeta estallado	Puñal	Querubín	Ra
Reloj	Ritual	Funerario	Sacrificio	Sarcófago	Satanás	Saturno	Serpiente
Sirenas	Tablas	Tecnología	Thot	Tiburón Martillo	Videos	Virgen	Yoga

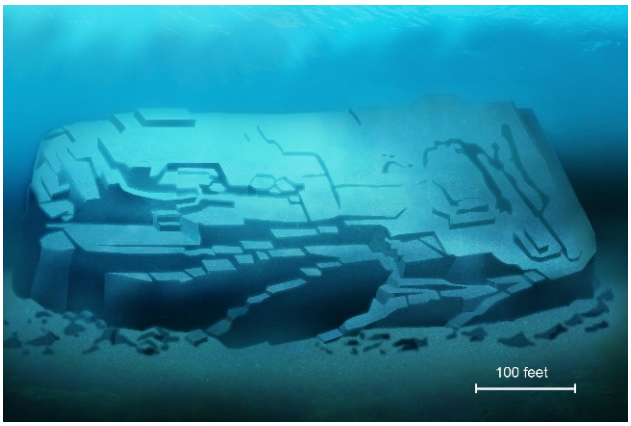
There was a world before this world.

You don't need to be an expert to determine that long ago one or more civilizations existed and eventually came to an end. Underwater scanners and maps confirm the existence of pyramids beneath the sea near the coast of Cuba. Divers and oceanographers can show you that in Yonaguni, Japan, there are several submerged megalithic structures.



If you add to that the oral and written traditions that speak of a great flood, you can imagine that many of these civilizations met their end due to natural disasters.

What about Plato's narrative in the "Critae"? The story told by Egyptian priests about a civilization called Atlantis, which sank into the sea near the Strait of Gibraltar (the Pillars of Hercules) and disappeared.

Open your mind and give yourself the opportunity to consider that a world existed before the world you know. So much so that scholars and archaeologists still disagree on the exact origin of the Olmecs.

Well, after reviewing the 3,000-plus pieces you claim to have examined... what conclusion did you reach?
After much thought and reflection, trying to consider different angles and points of view, I concluded that the writings of the Judeo-Christian tradition are the closest to the truth..

Let me tell you something about the Torah, Bereshit, the Pentateuch, and the Bible in general…

You haven't understood the Bible.

You think you understand it, but the truth is, you don't. To understand the Bible, you must see it with different eyes, but I have a whole chapter reserved for that (if you're interested in reading it).

So... what is this book about?

This book is about answers, and it will generate new questions. There are many things I've been able to deduce, and there are also new mysteries that go beyond my understanding... (for now).

You are in the middle of a war.

Listen to me. Humanity has been at war since the time of Adam and Eve. The effects of this war are visible everywhere.

In many cities, the water is contaminated with fluoride, under the pretext of reducing dental disease. The amount of fluoride per million in the tap water exceeds the legal limit.

The air in cities is covered in smog, generated by our cars that still run on gasoline.

Food is full of chemicals, preservatives, and sweeteners, all of which have the potential to cause cancer. The food you find in stores is high in sugar, sodium, and fat. Water bottles and food packaging are filling your body with microplastics. You already have Teflon in your blood without even knowing it.

What you see on television, social media, and the internet is full of sex, violence, and misinformation.

Your job is poorly paid, wealth is unevenly distributed, and power is concentrated in the hands of a few.

The healthcare system has collapsed, and medical research only advances if it's profitable.

Alternative medicine is ridiculed.

If you live in a city, let me tell you that every aspect of your life is susceptible to manipulation and suffering, whether because bureaucratic government systems don't work or because free enterprise is succumbing to taxes. Or because banks change the rules regarding interest rates (whichever way you go, you're just replacing one poison with another).

The lives of 99% of human beings are absolute misery, a sea of misery and ignorance. A continuous state of perpetual confusion. And it will continue like this for a while...

Nothing is accidental; everything was planned this way. Beyond being a system of control, it is a system of oppression. With different conditions in different contexts, in different eras, throughout the ages. Remember. IT IS NOT A COINCIDENCE.

Who are we at war with?

You know it well. As ridiculous as it may seem, as stupid as it sounds, the truth is that humankind has always been at war with the beings up there, beyond the firmament.

What good is it to know that you are at war?

Moreover, what good is this book to you???

Knowing you're at war helps you see things more clearly and allows you to adjust your priorities and goals. Knowing you're at war gives you a certain degree of maturity, especially if you or your loved ones have been caught in the trail of destruction that war leaves in its wake.

Do you not have enough money to pay for your medical treatment? Are you disabled and can't get hired by any company? Are you a professional with years of experience, but because of your age (over 35), you can't get hired anywhere? Are you a single mother struggling to support your child?

Does it seem like everything is against you?
No es una opinión ni tu subjetividad. Es que es así.

Everything is against you.

You realize that the world is an unjust place, and God allows it; in fact, He wants it to be this way as a means of punishment for the many betrayals we committed in the past. (And it's just, as we'll see later.)

Knowing you're at war reminds you of something fundamental you've forgotten.

IN WAR, ANYTHING GOES.

Once you wake up and finally open your eyes to the reality that you live in a system meticulously designed to be unjust, then you can change the rules of the game. The system is rigged. Have you ever been cheated over and over again? What happens when you're constantly cheated? Have you become a cheat yourself to survive?

The system is rigged. Discard it! Cast it aside. Get out of the system or destroy it from within. The point is, you're in the middle of an unjust fight, and therefore, don't offer or expect mercy.

Secret # 2

It's all about genetics.

In the end, it doesn't matter whether you believe me or not. Scientists will prove me right in time. Regardless of what I might teach you or what you choose to believe about it, the great truth is that everything—listen carefully, EVERYTHING—is related to genetics.

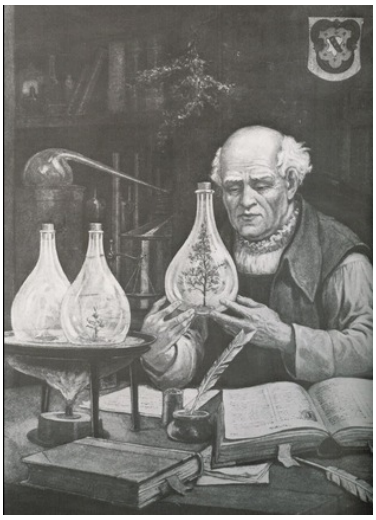
All the truths of this world will be revealed when the genetic codes of human beings are analyzed. Then what has been known from the beginning will be confirmed. It will be known that human beings are not "as human" as they believe. It will be known that someone thousands of years ago had the brilliant idea of playing with the building blocks of creation. It will be taken for granted that the evolution proposed by Darwin is not entirely correct. Mutations will be set aside, and people will begin to talk about…

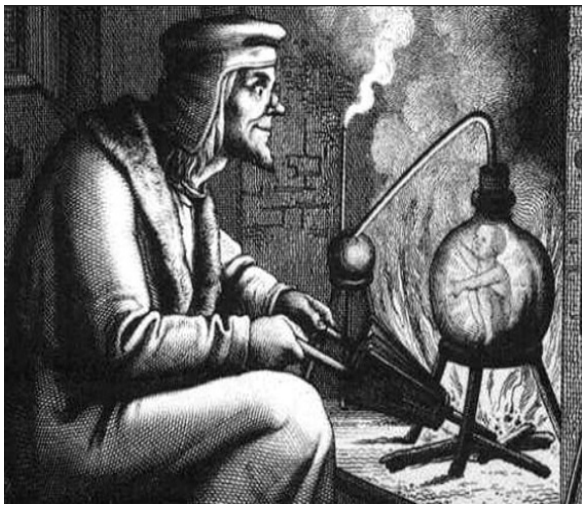
Genetic manipulation

And before you say this isn't possible, or that it couldn't have been possible in the distant past, I want you to consider the following:

1) We humans, with our limited technology and knowledge, have managed to crossbreed dog breeds. With this, we have created new breeds. Breeds for different purposes: hunting, guarding, fighting, racing, herding, and so on.

2) It is well known that Paracelsus, the father of modern medicine, was already fascinated by the concepts of alchemy and that in his writings he referred to the creation of homunculi, the creation of synthetic life. (And we are talking about the Middle Ages.)





What about the almond-shaped eyes of people of East Asian descent? And don't get me wrong, I have nothing against Asians. I'm simply highlighting a characteristic that clearly doesn't seem to be compatible with a mutation that would provide an evolutionary advantage. In fact, in many cases, it has been shown to be a disadvantage.

In the end, it will be revealed that the reason why there are very tall men, very short men, men with dark skin, men with excessively white skin, men with inherited diseases, genetic malformations, very ugly women (and men too) all has to do with genetics.

Because someone altered the original code of humankind, and with that, all the disputes began. White people don't like Black people, Asians feel like foreigners wherever they go. Indigenous people feel discriminated against, and people of mixed race are rejected by everyone.

Secret # 3

We are not alone.

We have never been alone, and we never will be. At this very moment, as you read the words of this book, there is already a living being by your side. One you don't see, one you rarely perceive, and yet is there with you (the Malachin). Your guardian angel.

And we are not alone.

Human beings tend to think they are the only intelligent beings capable of deep reasoning, of performing detailed analyses, of formulating plans and carrying out strategies, of inventing, manufacturing, and manipulating technology. Furthermore, humans think they are the only living beings capable of creating art.

Nothing could be further from the truth.

The typical question all skeptics ask:

If aliens exist, then why haven't they made contact with us? If aliens exist, then where are they?

The real question isn't "Where are they?"... the real question is... "Where aren't they?"

They are in:

- Outer space
- In the sky above the clouds
- In underground cavities beneath the Earth's surface
- In the depths of the sea
- In desert regions
- In human cities

They are above us, among us, and below us.

They have always been here, in this world. Moreover, they believe they have property rights. Powerful governments know where they are and what they are capable of. Today, we could say that governments have worked with them on the development and implementation of technology. Of course, this is under certain conditions and with certain demands that must be met.

In short, we were never alone. And after everything comes to an end, they will still be with us. But neither they nor we will remember that we were at war for thousands and thousands of years.

Isaiah 65:17

Secret # 4

Who are they?

There are so many questions surrounding this topic. What do they want? What are they doing here? Where did they come from? What are they capable of?

Let's take it one step at a time... first of all, what do they look like? They come in different types: tall, short, with black eyes, with red eyes. With three fingers on their hands, with four. Most of them have elongated heads. Some have scaly skin, some don't; some have gray skin, some have green skin. Some resemble insects, and others resemble Nordic humans (also called Pleiadians).

For our analysis, only one matters: the Greys. The others aren't important.

Okay, let's get back to it. Remember when I told you that archaeological pieces have been unearthed in Mexico? Well, what I'm about to explain came from the analysis of those pieces. I didn't make it up. What I did was extract the information from those pieces to share it with you.

So, what do the pieces tell us about the Greys?

Well, if it looks like a chicken, moves like a chicken, and lays eggs, then… it must be a chicken.

The pieces tell us that… the greys are snakes.

What WHAAAAAAAAAAT!!!!

That's right. From now on, my job is to convince you that the Greys are snakes. Listen, if they look like snakes, move like snakes, and have snake fangs, well… they must most likely be snakes.

I understand you. I know what you're thinking. But snakes slither on the ground and have tails, not legs. Besides, snakes are very different animals from the Greys!

Believe me, I understand you. I understand you perfectly.

And the Greys' situation is complicated. Quite complicated.

The Greys are a complete culture, a race independent of humans, with their own beliefs, traditions, technology, and methods of reproduction. Most importantly, they have their own history—a rather complex history, deeply intertwined with the biblical narratives of the Judeo-Christian tradition.

Secret # 5

The secret history of the children of Satan.

(Spoiler alert) This topic will be revisited when we analyze the Bible in part 3 of this book.
Okay, according to the Bible, Satan had children, many children (Genesis chapter 3, verse 15; if you can, read it in different versions of the Bible), and they were like their father. They all had elongated heads, almond-shaped eyes, wings on their backs, and were born without legs (although some were born with legs). They crawled on the ground and lived in harmony with nature. They hunted and were hunted. They are all fallen cherubim, for their father is a cherub (Ezekiel 28).

SON OF SATAN

I apologize in advance to the reader, because throughout the book you will see the term "son of Satan" several times. I could have also used the term "fallen cherub," but the problem is that there are other fallen cherubim involved in this story, and for that reason I have decided to differentiate between them.

I know the term is extremely repetitive. Sorry :S

Living with Humans and Hierarchy Systems

And why would a race with access to outer space use animal skin? Why do the eyepieces depict these highly advanced beings using animal skin?

The children of Satan were hunters; they had to pursue their prey to survive. They devised a method of skinning their prey, removing the skin, and then using the skins to make clothing. This clothing served as camouflage, allowing them to approach their prey more easily and discreetly, thus increasing their chances of a successful hunt.

When the children of Satan gained access to technology, they maintained the tradition of using the skins of their prey as trophies. Gradually, this practice evolved into a ceremonial garment. The garment represented the hunter's strength and status, and for this reason, they preserved this tradition within their culture. Despite their technological advancements, they did not abandon their traditions or religious customs.

As their population grew, power hierarchies based on the survival of the fittest emerged. Those with the greatest intelligence and physical attributes were at the top. They organized themselves around a single leader who ruled all the others, and they maintained this single-leader structure for thousands of years.

They were constantly at war with humans.

The coexistence between fallen men and fallen cherubim has been quite complex, because they both hated and loved each other, and they banded together to survive and endure the harsh weather. Their relationship has always been one of love and hate.

LOVE-HATE RELATIONSHIP.

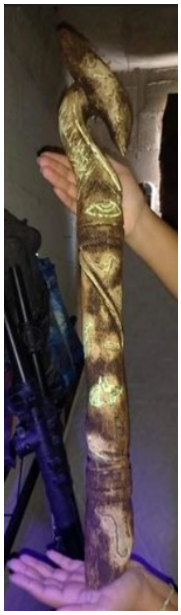
Despite being highly intelligent, they used very rudimentary tools. They hunted with spears. They enjoyed music, especially music related to wind instruments (such as flutes and conch shells). They had a love-hate relationship with felines. Although they loved small cats, large felines posed a threat to them (especially jaguars). They found affection and fascination in canines, especially jackals, whose love and loyalty won a place in their hearts.

They always felt an attraction to the stars and outer space. They observed the stars and even kept records of them. They were a backward culture; they lacked technological advancements and, on the contrary, used rudimentary tools.

“They lived like the indigenous people,” the children of Satan who had legs wore loincloths, and they had spears with which they hunted humans, whom they murdered without mercy.

After killing their prey, the sons of Satan decapitated their victims. They took the men's skulls and impaled them on stakes, which they used as staffs of authority. These staffs were used to display the power and worth of each individual.

Normally, only the leaders of the groups could possess these staffs, which represented their power and status within the social hierarchy.



Then their numbers began to increase greatly, and they (the children of Satan) spread across the face of the earth. With territorial expansion came disputes, and with disputes came violence. They began killing each other. Rampant evil coursed through their hearts, and bloodlust was the order of the day. (Important clarification: not all of them were evil.)

Now they not only hunted humans, but they also hunted each other. And the tradition of decapitation continued. They fought each other with knives and spears. And they decapitated each other, always making sure to impale the loser's skull on the winner's staff. They lived like this for a long time, in the jungle, hunting living beings and spilling blood everywhere. They lived like the indigenous people and were not very developed. One of their pastimes was carving stone. I don't know why they liked doing this so much. But from the beginning, they have enjoyed sculpting stone, whether to make statues, engravings, or representations of artifacts and living beings. Whatever the case, stone cutting and jewelry making have always been present in their history.

Another characteristic of the winged serpents (children of Satan) is that they considered themselves good parents. The adults were very careful and loving with their children. And before their children were born, the adults carried them in pouches. These pouches contained the eggs that would soon hatch.

Your questions…

Okay, I'm sure you have a lot of questions…

Let me see if I can read your mind. You're probably wondering the following:

If Satan had children, who were they with? Who was his consort?

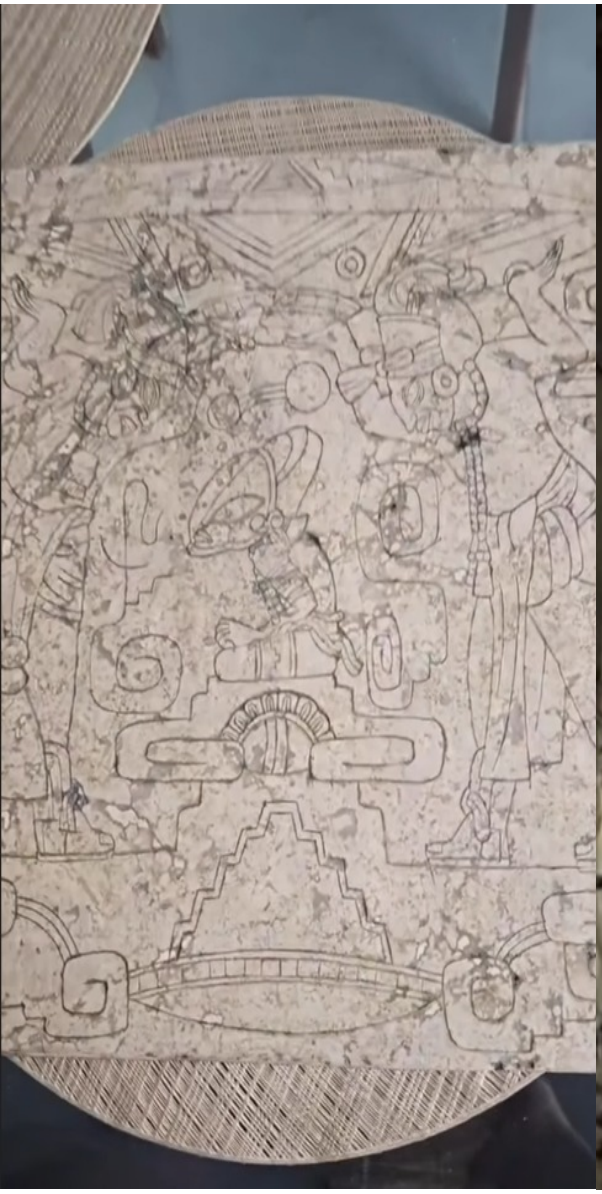
Answer: We don't know. Perhaps he didn't need a consort; perhaps he simply laid eggs and that was it.

If Satan's children were indigenous, then what do the extraterrestrial ships that appear in the images have to do with it?

Answer: The ships were cherubim that came from another planet. Keep reading…

You must be thinking something like… if Satan was an angel… Angels can't have children… reread Genesis chapter 3, verse 15.

Also, Genesis chapter 6 says that the sons of God had relations with the daughters of men, and giants were born from them… so… why do you say that angels can't have children?



From Indigenous Peoples to Astronauts

Our story continues beyond planet Earth. The objects collected in Mexico tell us about some strange events, to say the least.

Out there in outer space, there existed a celestial body (planet, moon, planetoid...we don't know), and on that celestial body lived some rather peculiar beings. They were tall, with bodies similar to those of humans. Some of them had wings on their backs. These beings wore strange helmets (or hats) from which faces protruded. These beings had eye sockets shaped like riangular eye sockets

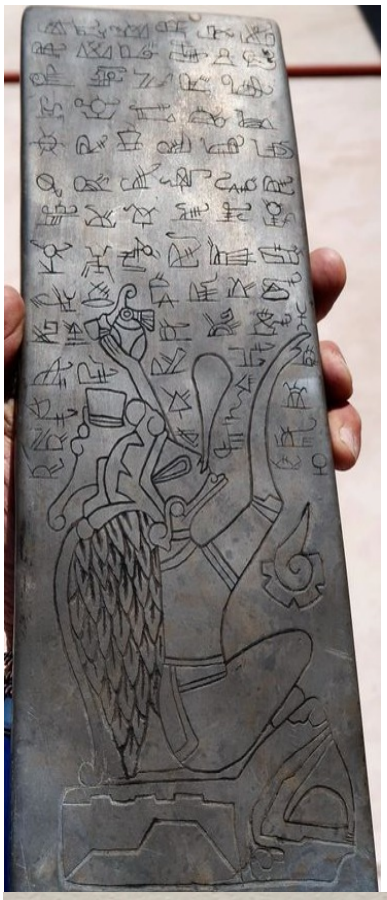
(This is a recreation I made using Paint, but don't worry, you'll see more of these beings in future scenes.)

Spoiler alert: Since these beings have three faces, it can be said that they were also Cherubim.

CHERUB

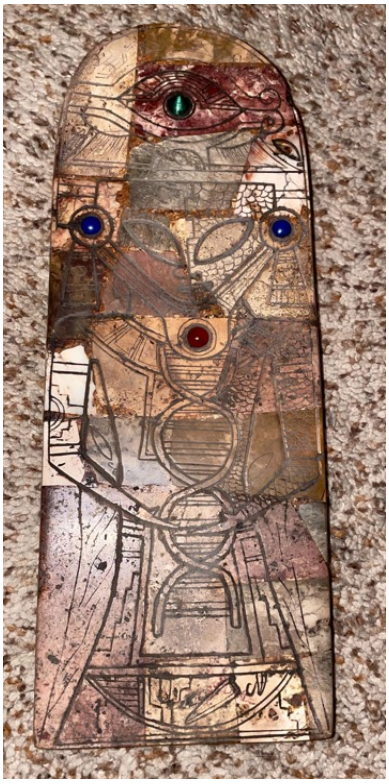
The planet where these cherubim lived exploded, whether from a comet impact or some internal factor. What we do know is that their home, their place of origin, was destroyed.

To survive, these cherubs were forced to abandon their home planet. The trauma of losing their home would haunt them forever. And they would forever remember that their home was destroyed. (That's why many artifacts clearly allude to this destroyed planet; this is seen in the association of cracks.) Example:



Using their advanced technology, these cherubim decided to travel to what we know as the planet Saturn. They stayed there for a while. They established their bases on Saturn and from there departed for Earth. (Perhaps that's why there are so many mentions of Saturn, and in fact, there's an entire cult associated with it, not to mention that in English there's "Saturday," the day of Saturn corresponding to the sixth day.) They saw Earth as a new opportunity, a new beginning. But there was a problem. Their bodies weren't adapted to survive under Earth's conditions (gravity, temperature, viruses, air, etc.). To solve this problem and be able to adapt to the conditions.

They had the idea of mixing their genetic code with the genetic code of the native living beings of the earth. They considered two possibilities: on the one hand, they could mix with humans, and on the other hand, they could mix with the winged serpents, the children of Satan. I suppose they opted to mix with the serpents because they had a better chance of consolidating both genetic codes into one, or perhaps they mixed with the serpents because God loved humans and they despised God for destroying their place of origin (honestly, we don't know why they chose the serpents). Whatever the reason, the point is that this marked a turning point in the history of the children of Satan.



To give you an idea, the children of Satan (the winged serpents) lived like indigenous people, and when they made contact with these beings from space, it was a huge culture shock for them. It was similar to when Christopher Columbus discovered America, when the Spanish established contact with the indigenous people of the region. A superior culture assimilating an inferior one. The same thing happened to the winged serpents (they were the inferior culture) and the cherubim who came from Saturn (they were the superior culture).

The contacts began gradually. The cherubim on Saturn would visit the children of Satan and then, after a time, would leave. When they departed, the winged serpents (the children of Satan) would fall into despair. They would do everything possible to attract the attention of these visitors. The visitors brought them knowledge. They brought them weapons and tools. The visitors were friendly and kind to them. The children of Satan loved them because they calmed their anxiety—an anxiety that had accumulated over centuries of constant warfare with humans, with other animals, and with themselves.

What are the Nazca Lines if not a desperate act to attract attention?
Come back! Come back!
Don't leave!
Don't abandon us!

The Nazca Lines were created by the children of Satan to attract the attention of these visitors who came from Saturn.

(Yes, I'm fully aware of how ridiculous this story sounds, but that's what the artifacts found in Mexico show.)

Rudimentary pyramids and makeshift mounds were built as landing sites for the enormous ships that came from the sky. Strange beliefs led them to sacrifice themselves to attract the attention of the visitors. The children of Satan, who had been constantly at war, began to compete among themselves.

They would seize members of other groups by their arms and legs and, from a small altar, take an obsidian knife with which they pierced the victim's chest. They would then remove the heart and, amidst chants and dances, invoke and beg for the visit of the beings who came from space.

We don't know how long this fusion of cultures lasted, we have no idea how long it took for the DNA structure to finally consolidate into one, we don't know the exact moment when the DNA of the children of Satan merged with the DNA of the cherubim of the exploded planet. What we do know is that they succeeded.

And

That was the moment when the ancient war between the children of Adam and the children of Satan was lost.

The moment the winged serpents became something more, something else entirely, half of this world and half of another. It was the moment when access to knowledge, technology, and information propelled them to a new frontier. Humankind could not compete against them, much less harm them in any way. Humankind's backward ideas and tools were no match for the advanced tools and vessels the serpents possessed.

That was the moment the winged serpents ceased to be indigenous beings and became gods, and humans ceased to be the stewards of this world and became slaves and pets.

The beginning of technology

You see, the scientific method “discovered” by human beings is older than you think. While it's true that Satan and his offspring had access to information and technology, it's also true that for them it required a long process—a process of trial and error.

What separates us from them in terms of power is our knowledge of the laws of physics. While they have a fairly clear idea of the limits of what is possible within spacetime, we are unable to abandon fossil fuels because it's not profitable to do so.

And what did Satan's offspring do with all that technology?

They played... that's what they did.

They began to experiment with genetics, trying to discover what was possible and what wasn't. Once again, they had the “brilliant” idea of crossing their genetic information, but this time they decided to cross their DNA with the DNA of animals. Nothing stopped them. Some of their most famous crosses were:

Crossbreeding with horses = The prototype of the first centaurs

Encountering lions = The prototype of the first sphinxes

Encountering sea creatures = The prototype of mermen and mermaids

One fine day in the ancient world, the children of Satan decided that by mixing their DNA with squid DNA, they could place a kind of tentacle on their chins, which would amplify their sensory capabilities to detect variations in air temperature. They believed that using squid tentacles as chins would offer several advantages, and so they did.

Remembering the animals they loved and that had been loyal to them, they began experimenting on them to amplify their abilities. They started with jackals.

When a winged serpent died, for some reason, jackals always approached the deceased's family and kept them company.

The first experiments with jackal DNA were unsuccessful. Genetic manipulation techniques had not yet been refined enough. What emerged from the experiments was an animal with the head of a jackal and the body of a serpent—a crippled, useless animal lacking advanced thought. They were far from the desired result. The winged serpents wanted an animal intelligent enough to put under their control.

Then a dangerous idea popped into their elongated heads… What would happen if we mixed human DNA with jackal DNA? What would happen if we crossed human genetic information with animal genetic information?

A rather dangerous idea, considering that humans were the ancient enemy of the children of Satan.

After several attempts, they finally succeeded. They had created a new race. Male and female they made. They adopted them as their own, making them part of their own family as if they were their own children. With this began the long process of teaching them their language, their writing, their culture, their technology. They taught them mathematics and astronomy. Physics and metallurgy. And they put them in charge of the funeral rituals.

The children of Satan remembered their ancient enemies, humankind, and decided on a new destiny for the children of Adam. They resolved to humiliate them and reduce them to slavery. They would take the winged serpents, the hybrid animals they had created, and place them as rulers, eventually making them gods in the eyes of men.

The process began with war. Men would not bend the knee without resistance. But the war was unsustainable for them. Many fell before the strength of the hybrids. The half-hawk, half-man pierced many men with his spear and cut off their heads as trophies.

Later, the children of Satan would again modify the Anubis race to add plant DNA to their animal DNA.

And over time, the children of Satan took human DNA, mixed it with animal DNA (goats), and added plant DNA to that mixture. (A horrible mix.)

This is how the ancient gods imposed themselves on men. With violence. The few men who survived submitted to the will of their new masters. New traditions were imposed, and the name of God was erased from the people.

Do you understand what I'm telling you?

I'm telling you that the ancient gods did exist, and these gods were hybrid beings created with genetic engineering. These beings, half human DNA, half animal DNA, reigned over men, and this phenomenon occurred throughout the world.

The children of Satan took over different human peoples and manipulated men's genetics, thus modifying their appearance. A slight change here, another slight change there, and that was it. Skin color had been diluted. Dark-skinned men began to appear here and there.

To the north, men were modified to have lighter skin. To the east, men were modified to have yellow skin. To the south, men were modified to have dark skin, and to the west, men were modified to have brown skin.

Eye color, hair color, hair texture, men's height, women's breast size, nose length, limb width—everything was modified. And the DNA remained that way, modified for centuries.

Amid laughter, they decided to diminish the descendants of Adam. To do this, the sons of Satan took one group of men and drastically reduced their height, while another group of men had their height drastically increased.

Genetics instinctively protects itself from anything that is not similar to itself. White men hated Black men, and Black men fought against white men. Racism intensified, and armies were established.

Then the children of Satan/the winged serpents of modified DNA (can you believe how ridiculous this is??) began to spread ideas among men. Belief systems for each people. Each people had its own god (a hybrid between man and animal).

But don't underestimate the hybrids because they were quite intelligent and mastered great technologies. Technologies to which you still don't have access.

And so cultures, peoples, gods, beliefs, hatreds, and traditions were born. You still see the "Afro" descendants engaged in ancient dances and chants, all of them trapped in the traumas of a distant past.

The administrators of this world were men. But men became the servants of animals. And everyone, both men and hybrids, forgot God.

Secret # 6

Origin of religions and the search for immortality

The children of Satan possessed advanced technology. They had control over everyone and depended on no one. They set out in their ships to explore the solar system and dared to travel beyond the heavens. From their many voyages, they created a map and carved their discoveries into the temples of their hybrids.

Thus, much time passed. Between the winged serpents and the half-human, half-animal hybrids, they decided to create a new type of being. In appearance, it would resemble a man, but in mind, it would be like a child of Satan. They took a dark-skinned man/woman and (through insemination) mixed the DNA of the serpent with the DNA of a man.

A man with an elongated head emerged. Greater cranial capacity for more gray matter. He was intelligent, cunning, skillful, and disproportionate. They took this hybrid man and filled his head with false beliefs. They gave him access to information and technology and inflated his ego to the highest degree.

Hierarchies are established and maintained through violence. A single, well-connected man can subjugate many. And this hybrid man had the support of the serpents and animal hybrids.

New wars began. Attempts were made to subjugate many peoples. Some managed to escape, but most succumbed. In this way, new empires were formed, and new hierarchies.

A pyramidal structure was formed:

• At the top, Satan and his children (both those who had altered their DNA and those who had not mixed with animals)

• Then the hybrids, half-man, half-animal (“the gods”)

• Then the kings/emperors/politicians (hybrids, half-man, half-serpent)

• Then the priests, servants of the gods and the pharaoh… the god-man…

• Next the military men (note that all men already had modified DNA, altered skin color, and other modified physical traits).

• Then the merchants.

• Then the artisans.

• Then the peasants.

• Then the slaves.

• And finally, the poor, the sick, the crippled, or those with some kind of disability.

All the peoples of the earth believed the string of lies the hybrids told them. They closed their eyes and prayed to the false gods. They sacrificed their children and killed their newborns in exchange for favors. The hybrids laughed as they enjoyed their lives amidst the feasts and orgies they themselves orchestrated.

Flesh, blood, and hearts had become corrupted. The creator and sustainer of all things regretted having created humankind. He abhorred the birds and the reptiles. And he flooded everything.

By killing them all, he cleansed the earth. But the children of Satan (the winged serpents) managed to survive.

Before the flood, winged serpents and humans had corrupted the earth. The serpents altered the genetic code of living beings. After the flood, the serpents once again played with the genetics of humans, animals, and the very structure of plants.

Okay... let's take a breath before closing this ridiculous chapter.

……...Not even with all the technology in the world.

If there is one thing that the children of Satan (winged serpents with modified DNA) never managed to conquer, it was death.

They did everything possible, tried every variation, developed every technology, but death is something they could not avoid. They developed cloning techniques. Techniques for transmitting information. They modified their own bodies to prolong their lives. They bred with other animals to postpone death. They traveled to other stars in search of answers. They tried many chemical processes to extend life.

In short, they wanted to be immortal and they failed..

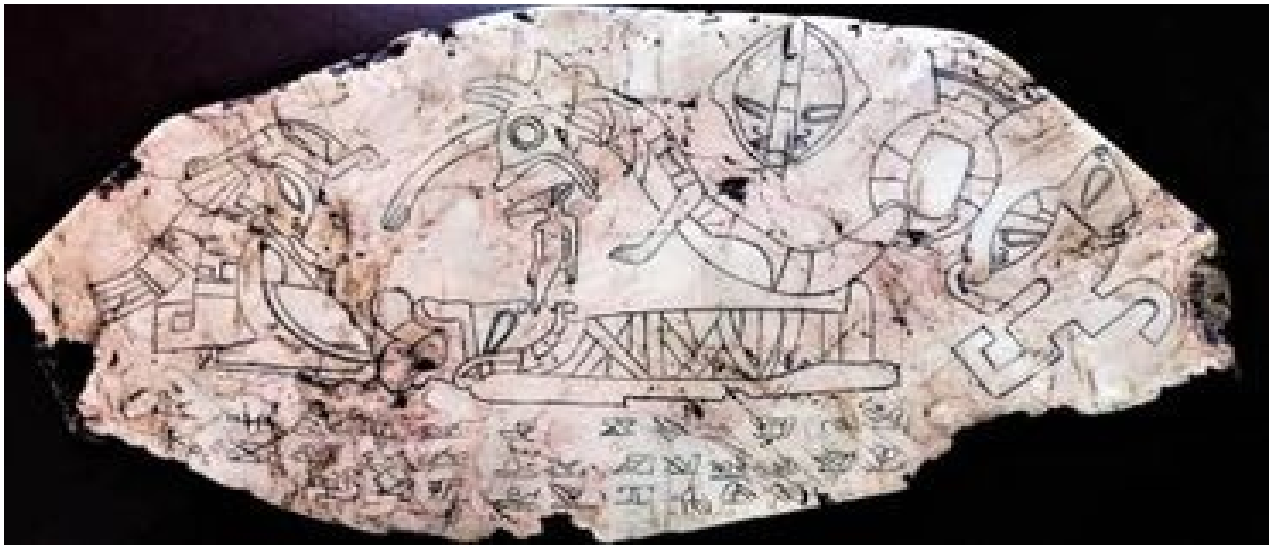
The origin of the Uroboros (the serpent that eats itself) infinity

In one of their many attempts, they concluded that if they created a new body and managed to transfer their soul into it, they could live forever by jumping from one body to another. The process was strange.

They had the following idea: What would happen if they took a body similar to that of the beings who had visited them in ancient times and transferred their dying soul to this new body (whose eyes were triangular) just before the moment of death?

Furthermore, if they were going to change from one body to another, why not change to a better body?

The process: They took the clone (immobile) and opened its mouth, then guided the soul of the dying serpent, somehow managing to get the dying soul to enter the mouth of the new (immobile) body.



The process required all sorts of technologies: cloning, space science, chemistry, electricity—it was a mix of many things. They must have had some success rate, or perhaps their desperation was so great that they tried again and again and again. Whatever it took to avoid dying.

I don't know who it was. Whether it was Satan or his offspring, someone came up with the idea that death could be mastered. They thought death could be overcome. It was all a matter of continuing to advance their scientific studies. So, for the time being, what they could do was preserve the bodies of the dead, hoping that one day, someone would somehow discover the secrets of eternal life and thus bring back to life all those companions who had died without knowing the secret.

They wrapped their dead in clothing and buried them underground. In fact, something strange they did was place the bodies of their dead inside their spaceships (this is quite strange… perhaps they did it as a ritual, or perhaps they did it to continue trying to bring them back to life).

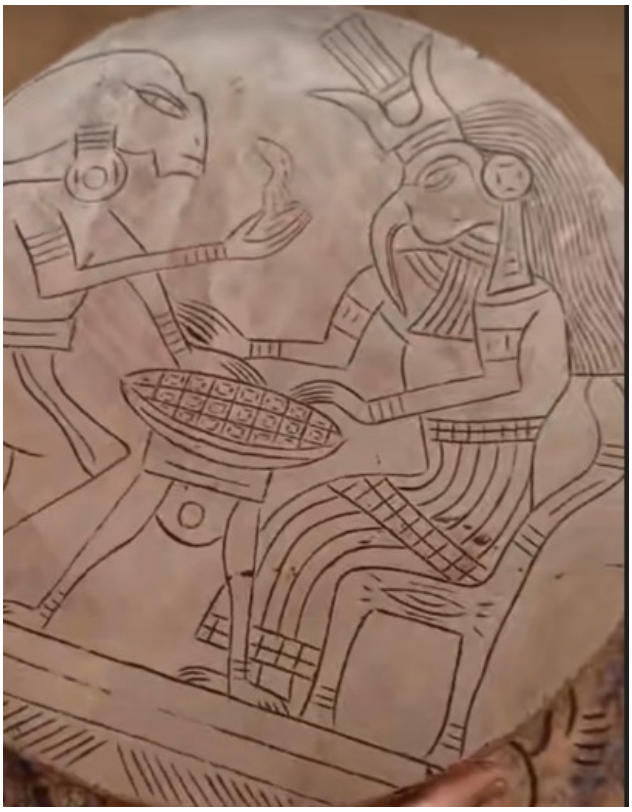
I don't know if you've noticed, but everything God makes is geometrically symmetrical, but the offspring of Satan, after so much playing with DNA, became asymmetrical, with very long or deformed fingers. They became hybrids, chimeras. But that is something that human science has not been able to understand.

This image suggests the transfer of consciousness to electronics.

Secret # 7

The true origin of chess.

While everyone stares in awe at Magnus Carlsen, Nakamura, or Garry Kasparov, I wonder, where did the game of chess come from? Such an advanced concept. It involves strategy, planning, tactics, complete mastery and understanding of the space and the limitations of each piece, as well as synchronization between the opponent's timing and my own. You can't afford to miss a move because missing a move would be wasting time, losing an opportunity, and that would give my opponent an advantage. The game has three stages: the opening (with its openings), the middlegame (with its tactics), and the endgame (in which the pawn structure and the activation of the king are paramount).



Such a game that has evolved over the years. It must have been conceived by a prodigious mind.

The modern game as we know it emerged in England sometime in the 20th century. If we were to go back further, we would find a game called Chaturanga in India and be confronted with a host of romantic and fanciful stories about the game's origin as a way to resolve a conflict between brothers in India. And yes... we can go back to India, and yes... there were elephants instead of rooks. But is this really the origin of chess? Or can we delve further back in history?

Because if we continue investigating, we will realize that chess originated in ancient Egypt. I believe an image has been found on a bastion of Queen Nefertiti in which a woman is clearly seen playing the game.

What would happen if we could go further back in the past? Further back in time and space? What would we find?

Imagine this scene for a moment.
At one end, a son of Satan, and at the other, a hybrid, half man, half animal; and in the middle, a chessboard. The pieces have changed. But the black and white squares are still there. And it might even be a more complicated game if we consider that each cuadro tiene un símbolo/inscripción dentro de si … No sabemos que función cumplen los símbolos que están en los cuadros, no sabemos si los símbolos son una especie de mensaje o solo una recreación de lo que era el juego original pero si sabemos que el concepto del juego original permanece

Aquí te va una bomba!!!

El juego más satánico del mundo. Es el ajedrez. Lo es porque su origen no fue humano. Lo es porque los hijos de satanás (serpientes aladas, querubines caídos) lo crearon. Lo es porque los híbridos lo jugaron y se entretenían con el.
Espero que uno de estos días te des cuenta que todo lo relacionado con el antiguo Egipto tiene un tinte satánico. Todo giraba alrededor del culto a la serpiente. No tienes que ir muy lejos, solamente mira al turbante del faraón y observa que animal se posa sobre su frente.

Secret # 8

The mark of the beast.

Many years ago, in one of Discovery Channel's many apocalyptic documentaries, the possibility was mentioned that the barcode could correspond to the mark of the beast. That documentary emphasized the importance of barcodes in our daily lives, as they functioned as labels that facilitated the classification of products and even living beings. The barcode helped automate accounting. It accelerated the organization of product inventories, and above all, the barcode is an excellent mechanism for transmitting information at the highest possible speed.

But the barcode didn't stay that way; it evolved… And now we have "new" technology: QR codes. A more secure way to transmit encrypted, or rather, "packaged" information.

The true origin of the QR code.

Initially, the QR code was created and used by the children of Satan to summarize information.

After reviewing hundreds and hundreds of archaeological artifacts, noticing how everything revolved around the editing, manipulation, and recoding of DNA and genetic codes, I must conclude that the primary use of QR codes was to condense information related to the genetic hybrids created by the children of Satan.

I believe that QR codes served, in a way, to classify and also to explain the genetic alterations that the children of Satan performed on animals, humans, and themselves.

With this, I want to tell you that the concept of barcodes is not new and that the consolidation of QR codes was already underway more than 2,000 years ago.

Just think about for a second. In the Book of Revelation/Apocalypse mentions the concept of a mark, a mark related to the number 666 or 616 (depending on the Bible version you read). It also states that everyone had this mark, men and women, rich and poor, free and enslaved; no one was exempt. It also says that the mark was placed on the right hand or forehead and that no one could buy or sell without it.

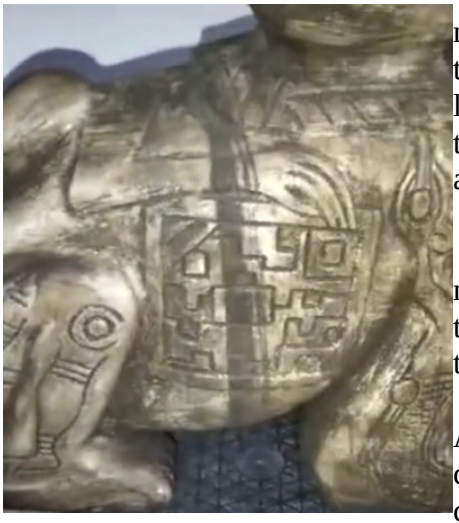
In a society that revolves around trade, the simple inability to exchange goods or services implies death. How will you obtain the basic necessities for survival? How will you pay for medical care and other services that make life easier? The mark of the beast can be seen as a dead end for all those who depend on trade to survive.

In the past, it was thought that the mark of the beast could consist of some kind of microchip implanted under the skin. In fact, they even conducted tests to create artificial implants. And today, RFID technology exists to power these chips.

Many people might see the implantation of these chips as highly invasive, and certainly many wouldn't get implants under their skin. But what about a tattoo? Or something like that? Similar to a tattoo. This is where the description of a QR code fits perfectly. The code is simply an identifier whose image can be translated into a series of zeros and ones. It can redirect you to a link hosted on a cloud server.

So, you would simply scan the QR code on your right hand or forehead, and from there, all your personal information could be retrieved. This could include your bank details, credit history, medical history, the company you work for, your current salary, your university studies, and so on. You only need a QR code and a camera to scan it.

Now, this raises cybersecurity concerns. For example, how can we guarantee that a person's information won't be falsified, deleted, copied, modified, or compromised?



I just want you to think about one thing for now. Today in Europe, digital money reigns supreme. Most payments are made via point-of-sale terminals, and physical credit cards have begun to disappear since you can load your own credit card directly from your cell phone using NFC technology. More and more banking apps are being used to make payments and transfers without using cash.

Conversely, the most underdeveloped developing countries continue to make most of their purchases with cash, and nothing has managed to stop this trend. Even the production of counterfeit banknotes hasn't discouraged the use of cash as a medium of exchange for transactions.

Another aspect to consider is the cultural context of developing countries, where tax evasion and hatred of government corruption motivate people to conduct cash transactions, avoiding the now-common electronic invoicing. All of this is done to pay less in taxes or remain anonymous, like a ghost to the state. Interestingly, the use of cryptocurrencies has revived the concept of tax evasion by using alternative payment methods outside of traditional banking and government channels.

What would happen if, tomorrow, QR code technology were combined with cryptocurrencies? What if the money you know were replaced by cryptocurrencies managed by governments? What do you think will happen with the implementation of artificial intelligence in the workplace?

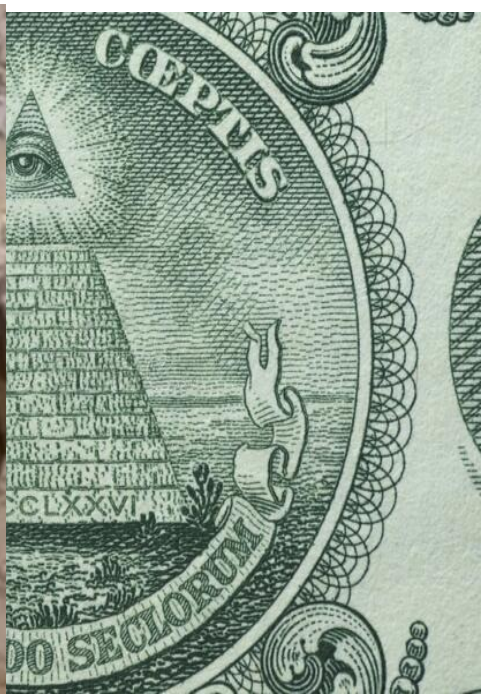
When a 50% reduction—yes, you read that right, 50%—of the workforce is already predicted, all due to the automation that artificial intelligence will bring about. Why am I asking you this? Because artificial intelligence will force us toward a universal basic income or the collapse of order and security in the society you know.

If AI replaces 50% of the human workforce, which still has to pay its debts, bills, and taxes... then where will the wages, the money, or the income come from? How can we pay those bills? Everyone suffers, not just individuals, but also businesses and governments. Because where there's no money, there's no consumption.

There's no income for businesses, nor is there money to pay taxes. So, if universal basic income is controlled by governments, what will happen to freedom of expression and universal human rights?

The big question is... how is everything kept under control?

If you read the Book of Revelation, you'll know that things will get worse and worse. To such an extent that people will no longer respect their leaders, and society will finally collapse into extreme violence.



Secret # 9

The true origin of money.

If you were told that primitive humans traded seashells for leaves and so on until they created the barter system. If you were told that banks created the first credit notes and promissory notes. If you were told about private banks and the rise of central banks. Let me tell you something.

What a childish story you were sold.

The concept of money is older than you think. And it was imposed by force, with violence. Like everything else.

From what I could see while analyzing the archaeological pieces and artifacts from Mexico, something that stands out is the constant appearance of proto-Sumerian writing. And something that caught my attention was the appearance of coins with proto-Sumerian inscriptions on them. These coins led me to consider the following scenario.

What if the ancient Sumerian gods were nothing more than genetically modified hybrids? All of them created by the children of Satan (winged serpents with modified DNA) if these hybrids with human and animal DNA had access to technology and information. And observing these coins carved with cuneiform writing, I can only deduce that money was a system created by the hybrids and the children of Satan to control and subjugate human beings. What is money if not a promise and a system of manipulation?

Want to build something? You simply have to bribe a bunch of people with promises. And how do you do that? You assign an imaginary value to a piece of metal and guarantee that this value represents the effort of their labor. Money is an idea. Money is debt. As the wise saying goes, "Give me the gold and I don't care who writes the rules." Money creates laws and puts people in political positions. Money is power because we all agree that money has value. But as such, a banknote or a piece of metal has no intrinsic value (except for gold and silver, which can be used to produce tools).

Listen, go to Ezekiel 28 and read the story of Satan. You'll realize that he became corrupted by his many contracts; in other translations, it says he became corrupted by his intense commerce. Now I want you to ask yourself the following question: What was Satan trading? With whom was he trading it? And what did he do to become corrupt? Did he breach his contracts?

You don't have to be a genius to deduce that Satan's objective was, in some way, to obtain power at any cost. We know that information is power. But what if he were exchanging information related to genetics? After all, genetic information defines an individual's innate abilities, and simply modifying those blocks of information can lead to significant increases in the physical (and perhaps even psychic) capabilities of a living being. Be that as it may (and I am fully aware of how absolutely crazy and fantastical everything I've told you so far is... and it's going to get worse...), what I can assure you is that the father of commerce is Satan. And if he is the father of commerce, then it shouldn't surprise you that both he and his children know and have applied financial strategies for manipulation and blackmail, for oppression, and for achieving goals and objectives established before and after the flood. What chance do we humans have against beings who created board games (like chess), beings who understand tactics and strategies, beings who have implemented manipulation, blackmail, violence, and genetic hybridization? Beings with complete knowledge of electronics, physics, space travel, energy sources, etc., etc.

Just tell me one thing... WHAT MAKES YOU THINK THOSE BEINGS DON'T CONTROL TRADE?

Everything is always ridiculous and stupid. Until you really think about it.

Have you noticed that all international trade requires the US dollar? Have you noticed that the SWIFT system, which allows for international transactions, is absolutely tied to the dollar? At the time of writing this book, several nations already want to break away from the dollar, wanting to make their payments in other currencies and through other means. But the dollar's hegemony remains strong. In most cases, countries that are rivals of the United States make their payments using dollars or find ways to circumvent the SWIFT system to keep it functioning.

Very good, excellent. Now that we've established the importance of the dollar as a reserve currency for international payments, let me ask you a few questions.

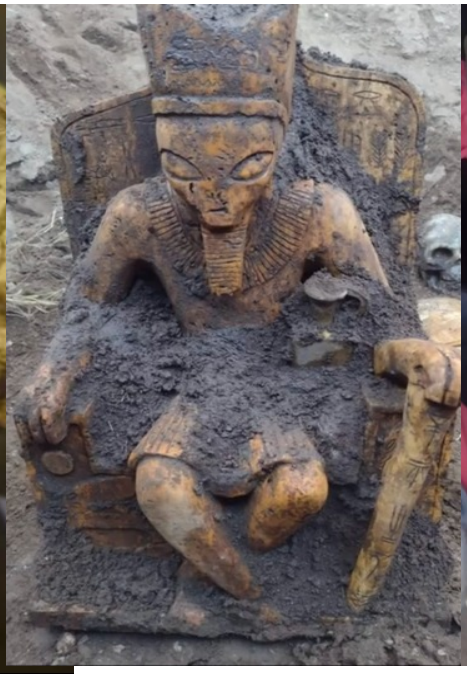
1) Why does the US dollar bill have an unfinished pyramid with an all-seeing eye?

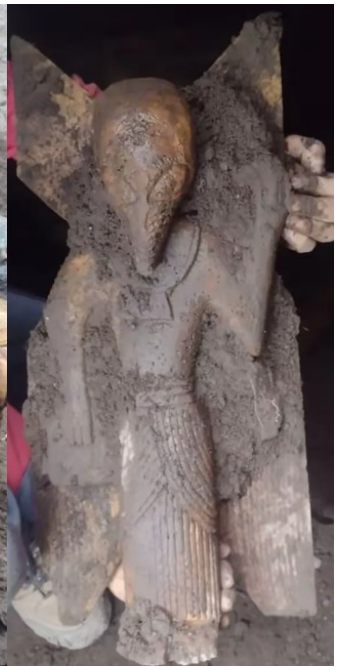
2) If that image represents the seal of Congress, who authorized it?

3) If the seal of Congress is strongly linked to Freemasonry, why did a Masonic symbol end up on the one-dollar bill?

4) If the Founding Fathers of the United States were Freemasons, then why did they use Egyptian symbols?

Because everything, absolutely everything, goes back to ancient Egypt.





Tomb Ramses IV

Secret # 10

Ancient Egypt is pure Satanism.

When you look at the drawings of the Dendera Temple, what do you see? A multitude of nonsensical beings and an enormous mystery that has captured the imagination of many men throughout the centuries. Napoleon was already fascinated when he invaded Egypt with the French army. He ventured inside the pyramid of Giza and spent a night there. He said that the experience changed him.

That deranged Aleister Crowley also attempted to perform a ritual there and is said to have made contact with a being who dictated to him his philosophy of "Do what thou wilt shall be thy law"... a being with an elongated skull... nothing we haven't seen before.

Not to mention Sahi Hawass, who entered the interior of the Great Sphinx. He explored it, examined it. He sealed it, closed it, and never spoke of it again.

¿Wasn't the great clairvoyant Edgar Cayce the same one who said that beneath the Sphinx's right paw lay the Hall of Records, where humanity's lost history would be rediscovered? It's not that I support Cayce, whose prophecies have been said to have failed to come true. Rather, I want to highlight the fact that there's something strange about Egypt, and it's quite obvious to everyone that too many things don't add up.

You can deny the mysteries of the pyramids. You can accept the official narrative and simply say, "Yes, indeed, the pyramids were funerary sites to connect the pharaoh's soul with the stars, and yes, they were built within a period of 20 years."

You can do that... what you can't do is solve the mystery of the Serapeum, whose giant marble sarcophagi didn't even fit through the doors. In other words, how could they lift something so large, so heavy, so perfect, and how could they bury it?

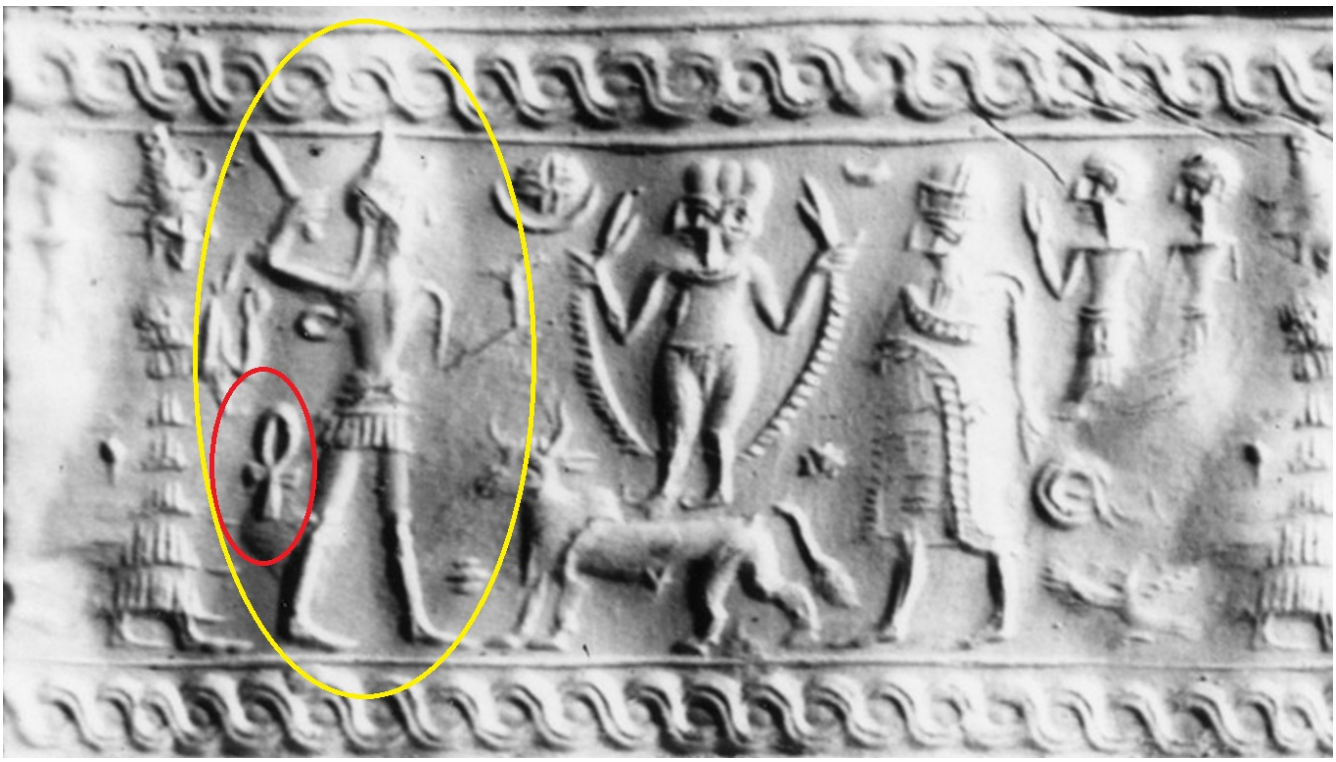
Listen, we could dedicate an entire book to Egyptian culture and formulate hundreds of hypotheses based on what we think we know, but instead, I'll tell you the basics you need to know about that place.

To be honest, I don't even know where to begin.

As I mentioned in my podcast, if we were to examine the Bible as a reliable source with some historical validation, then we could conclude that after the flood, Noah's sons multiplied across the earth, and among them was a very particular one named Mizraim, from whom the Egyptians are believed to have descended.

What is Egypt?



¿Why is the Egyptian ankh on a Sumerian tablet? And what is that being in the yellow circle?

I was watching a podcast by the famous YouTuber Joe Rogan, and I could see in his eyes a hint of confusion and a desire to know… about what happened in Egypt in the past.

Isn't that the question we all ask ourselves? When you see all they achieved, the thousands of years they endured, the temples they built, the beliefs they held, the way their society functioned, you can't help but consider the possibility that something unusual happened there.

Ask yourself this… If other cultures and ethnic groups existed, why did Egypt progress more than all of them?

I've seen a lot of memes online making fun of Giorgio Sukalos, the host of the History Channel's Ancient Aliens program. For him, the answer to everything is: "Aliens." Who did it, how did they do it, why did they do it… everything is about aliens… and honestly, I don't blame him.

I feel the same way about this book, because for me, everything is about "the children of Satan," and that's my answer to everything. Who did it, how did they do it, and why did they do it? Everything is related to them.

And honestly, I don't blame myself (because after reviewing more than 3,000 artifacts—and yes, it was more than 3,000, and I'm still reviewing new pieces as new excavations uncover them), I've come to the conclusion that denying the existence of these beings we call aliens is foolish, because the influence they have had and continue to have on human society is alarming.

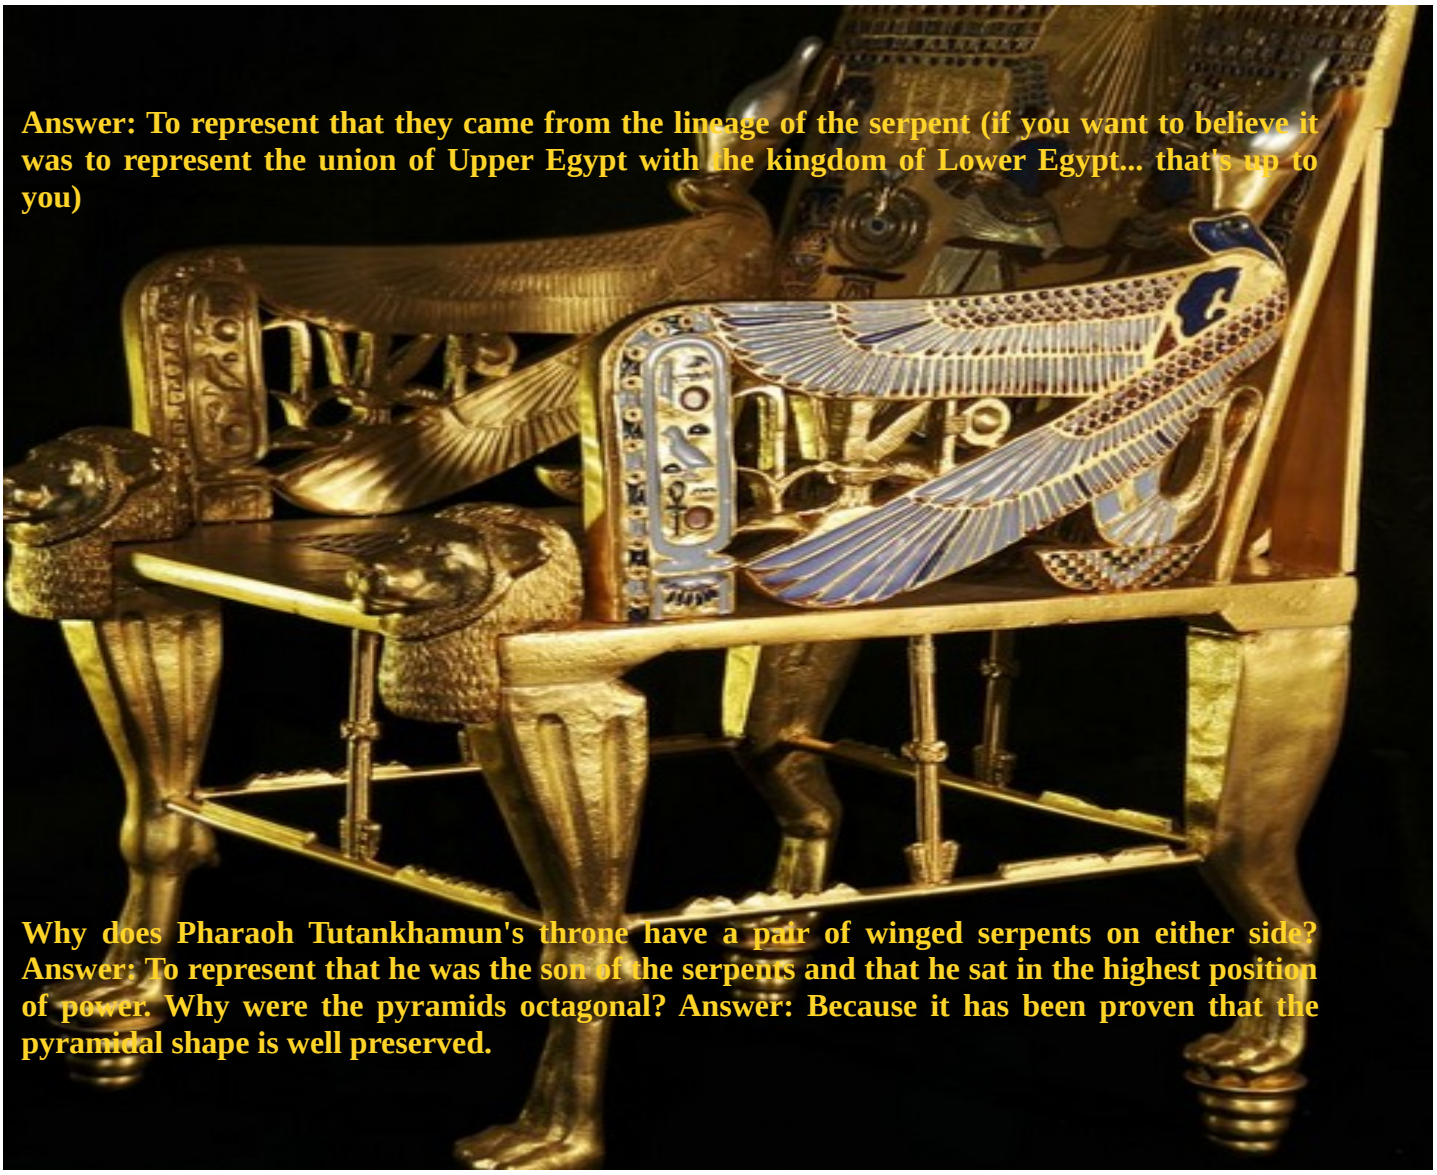
Let's repeat the formula: let's go from the general to the specific, because I have a lot to say about Egypt.

Let's start with a set of basic questions and short answers.

Why did pharaohs like Akhenaten have elongated skulls?

Answer: Because Akhenaten was a hybrid whose DNA was half human, half winged serpent (cherub).

Why did the pharaohs' headdresses have a snake on their heads?



Answer: To represent that they came from the lineage of the serpent (if you want to believe it was to represent the union of Upper Egypt with the kingdom of Lower Egypt... that's up to you)
Why does Pharaoh Tutankhamun's throne have a pair of winged serpents on either side? Answer: To represent that he was the son of the serpents and that he sat in the highest position of power. Why were the pyramids octagonal? Answer: Because it has been proven that the pyramidal shape is well preserved.

the biological material contained within.

Why is Egyptian writing full of snakes and other strange symbols?

Answer: Because both Sumerian and Egyptian writing systems were created by the children of Satan using symbols that predated Egyptian culture and already represented their abstract thought. This explains why certain symbols are constantly repeated, such as the serpent symbol, the feather symbol, the DNA symbol (even though they tell you it represents a river), the spaceship symbol (which, interestingly, also resembles the Mayan symbol for the number zero), and many others, like the funerary symbol inherited from the children of Satan to represent their embalming process.

Why was Egyptian culture so obsessed with life after death and achieving eternal life?

Answer: Because the children of Satan tried many methods to achieve eternal life through technology and never succeeded.

Why is there a wall in Dendera depicting spaceships?

Answer: Because there were spaceships (and if you're told that's pareidolia and that they're simply writing symbols that one king placed over the writing of the previous king, and that these words overlap, consider that merging those words/symbols would have resulted in something illegible for the reader. Therefore, the theory that they were two words superimposed on one another is nothing more than a big lie, but hey, believe what you want).

Why is there a graphic representation of a dwarf carved on one of the walls of the Egyptian temples?

Answer: Because the children of Satan played with human DNA and, to humiliate humanity (who have been their naturalenemies from the beginning), decided it would be amusing to alter the original stature of human beings, thus creating a new variation: dwarf humans.

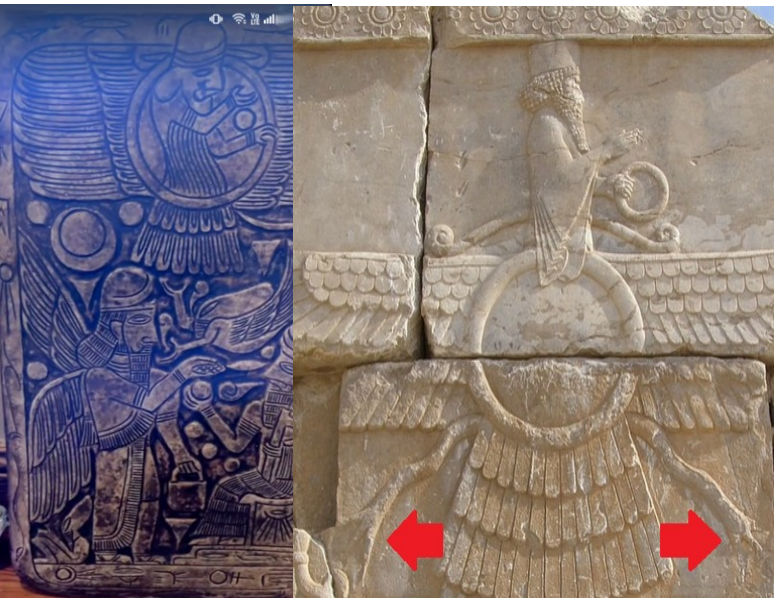
Why is there a temple that displays what appears to be an electric light bulb with a snake inside?

Answer:

IT'S NOT AN ELECTRIC LIGHT BULB... IT'S SOMETHING MUCH WORSE THAN THAT and it's strongly linked to Sumerian and Aztec culture.

In Egyptian mythology, the explanation is that it's a serpent inside a flower, and that's indeed what you're seeing. But you can't understand what you're seeing because you lack context. But since we're talking about mysteries, let's solve it once and for all.

Have you noticed that in Sumerian/Babylonian culture... or whatever... Ahura Mazda, or Shamash, or Samazu, is represented as a bearded man inside a disc with two wings?



The disc represents an extraterrestrial spacecraft; the wings represent that the spacecraft could fly, hence it has wings on the sides.

Aha… and then I have the million-dollar question… what do those leg-like things sticking out from the sides of the disc represent? What are they? What on earth are they?

In my archaeological observations, I've only been able to find one fairly old and reliable representation that connects the two cultures, Egyptian and Sumerian.

You will notice that below the disc what comes out is a kind of stem, like the stem of a flower, and after that the monument is destroyed and can no longer be seen.

Entonces si no son bombillas que son…

Te diré lo que veo y te lo sustentare como todo…

Son como plantas pero en el interior de estas plantas hay como una especie de capsula y en el interior de esa capsula hay una serpiente

Oh, darn, you haven't said anything...

Wait, wait. Do you remember the tree of life in Sumerian culture?

Oh, darn, you haven't said anything...

HOLD ON TIGHT BECAUSE IT'S GOING TO GET HARD TO BELIEVE…

Look, what happened is that the children of Satan experimented extensively with genetics, DNA, and the fundamental structures of all things, including the animal and plant kingdoms.

In their reproductive system, the children of Satan originally hatched from eggs. But they modified the DNA of their bodies, and with their modified bodies, they also experimented with copulation like mammals. They experimented with many forms of reproduction, both sexual and asexual.

Until many, many years later, they had the strange idea that they could reproduce en masse if they used plants as a tool.

You know that plants produce fruit periodically. Well, the children of Satan arranged for the plants to produce these kinds of eggs instead of fruit (eggs with modified DNA), and from these eggs, new children of Satan would eventually be born.

Let's recap, because I know you didn't understand a damn thing.

The children of Satan modified their own DNA and altered the functions of plants to create a grafting mechanism whereby the plants would not bear their normal fruit, but instead would produce these cone-like structures which contained the eggs that would become their new offspring. Hence the name, the Tree of Life (because it was indeed the plant from which the new offspring of the children (redundancy intended) of Satan came).

Let's recap one last time because I know you haven't understood me.

PTo summarize: the children of Satan... mixed their DNA with plants to... create a plant whose fruits were eggs... eggs from which new children of Satan would be born.

Read it again... I know it's not easy to understand the first time...

Okay?

Yes, I know, it's a terrible mess.

Look, I won't deny that those famous light bulbs have made me think of cryogenic systems or something like that, nor will I deny that I've also thought about cloning systems and all sorts of capsules.

But believe me when I say that I've seen representations of the Sumerian gods and the Egyptian gods many times... and other gods... and they always hold a pinecone in their hands and are always next to the "blessed tree."

And as I've said throughout the book... if it looks like a chicken and moves like a chicken and clucks like a chicken and lays eggs... well, it's most likely a chicken!

If I... look at these beings next to the trees... and see that they're eating the blessed pinecones and see that it's all related to DNA, and if... I... I have the damn photos where you can clearly see the eggs inside the bags, and I... I've seen that the eggs are associated with DNA, and I see that there are multiple references to the trees from which these fruits come... and I see that everything revolved around DNA and genetics.

Well, I have to surrender and accept that this is indeed how it was... even though I don't fully understand it, even though I can't explain how this is possible from a scientific point of view, I have to tell you that they (the children of Satan) did manage to mix the animal and plant kingdoms.

And we'll have to revisit this topic of mixing animal DNA with plant DNA later. You can see it at the following link:

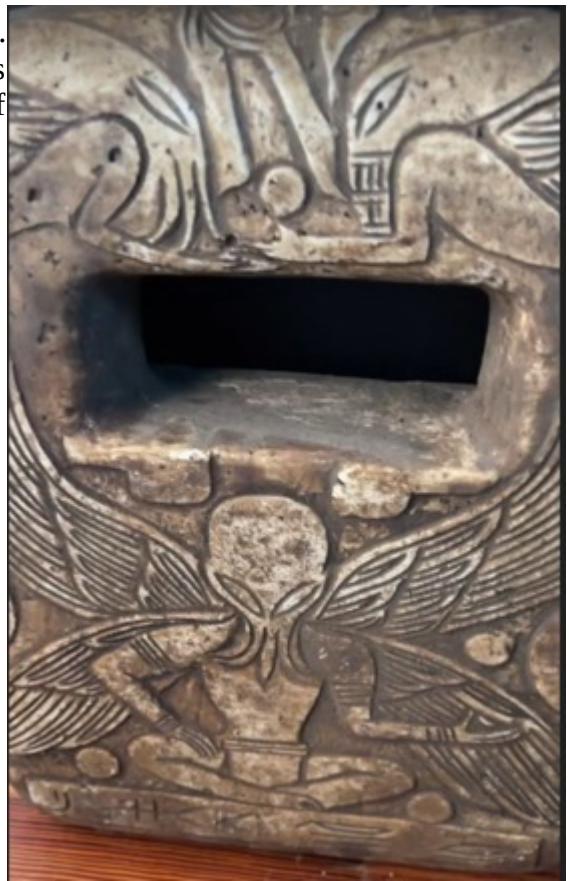
Secret # 11

The handbags.

If you read the end of the previous chapter, then you will have deduced that the bags, which are present in many cultures, were used to preserve the (pinecones/cones/eggs).

The bag served as a vehicle for transporting these eggs. Typically, a total of three eggs fit inside the bags. These eggs had modified DNA, and from them would hatch a kind of tadpole with an elongated head.



Secret # 12

The gods of antiquity were made of flesh and blood.

Let's analyze this for a moment. Do you remember Saint Thomas? The same Saint Thomas who told his friends, "Unless I touch the wounds in Jesus' hand and put my hand into his side, I will not believe that he rose again, much less that he appeared to you."

Think about it for a moment… We're talking about a man who lived with Jesus, who worked alongside him, who saw his miracles, who witnessed his accomplishments. We're talking about a man who lived with Jesus, a man who shared the same table with Jesus, a man who saw Jesus heal the sick and raise the dead!

And this man, "Thomas," was skeptical, completely unbelieving despite having lived with the Messiah.

What does that tell you about people 2,000 years ago? Let's recall his exact words: "Unless I see it with my own eyes and touch it with my own hands, I will not believe it."

What does that make you think about people who lived 2,000 years ago?

Our ancestors were skeptical.

You were sold the lie that in ancient times they had a series of beliefs and a mythology based on "faith," meaning that people believed without having seen. However, haven't you wondered about the origin of those beliefs?

Who was the first person to say that Zeus existed, and how did that person convince others of Zeus's existence?

Why did the Greeks, the Egyptians, the Sumerians, and so on, hold such firm beliefs? To the point of building temples, erecting statues, and holding festivals and rituals in his honor. Our ancestors included their gods in their prayers and kept them present in their daily lives.

If you examine the writings of Emperor Marcus Aurelius, you will realize that for him, the “gods” were real beings, and these “gods” had influence over the lives of men.

Do you consider Marcus Aurelius, “Emperor of Rome,” to have been foolish? Do you think his beliefs stemmed from traditions and “faith”? Or, on the contrary, were Marcus Aurelius’s beliefs based on the testimonies and experiences that Romans had in their daily lives with these entities called “gods”?

I just want you to understand that our ancestors weren't as stupid as you think. Some of them even had access to advanced technologies (like the Antikythera device mentioned earlier).

The fact is, the ancient "gods" existed and lived among us. These gods were flesh and blood and looked exactly as they were depicted in statues and drawings on temple stones. Most of these gods had a half-human, half-animal appearance (this pattern would be repeated constantly in different cultures).

Look at the gods of India, now look at the gods of Taiwan, look at the Egyptian gods, and now look at the Sumerian gods—the pattern is constantly repeated. Half-human, half-animal beings.

As we saw in secret #5, the gods are the result of genetic experiments; they are a mixture of animal and human DNA. They are hybrids. These hybrids had access to a great deal of information about science, mathematics, physics, astronomy, and technology. These hybrids had access to the first functional machines with printed electronic circuits. These hybrids had access to computers, spaceships, machines capable of modifying DNA, and musical instruments.

What did these hybrids do with humans? They used humans as servants and slaves. Humans felt honored to serve these hybrids because it was a way to rise in social status, a way to occupy positions of power. It's important to note that these hybrids did teach humans many concepts related to mathematics, art, and culture. Thanks to these hybrids, civilizations took off. Systems were created and implemented. People learned to read, write, and build buildings. Agricultural technologies were taught and shared with them.

Even the Spanish were surprised to see the Mayan crops, as they were quite sophisticated.

These hybrids had tastes for food, celebrations, and sex. Some of them managed to reproduce and perpetuate their species.

These hybrids had internal struggles and vied for power among themselves. The story of Horus avenging his father Osiris by killing his uncle Set has more truth to it than people imagine. The struggle between the devas and the asuras in India is yet another example of how these beings hated each other and wanted to control everything.

Something ironic that happened to the children of Satan is that they were the creators of these hybrids and they were the ones who granted them access to technology and information. They educated them and at some point in history treated them as equals. But the hybrids betrayed their creators and even forced their creators to treat them like gods!

Don't you find it ironic? That the work of the winged serpents, the result of their labor, their genetic creations, would turn against them, declare war on them, and subjugate them?

Yes, I do... and that's exactly what will happen to us human beings when we create robots or cyber-biological beings with artificial intelligence. Eventually, the work of our hands will turn against us and enslave us.

Okay, so what happened to these gods? What became of them? We know, thanks to Saint Augustine, that during the period known as the Late Roman Empire, specifically between the second half of the 4th century and the first quarter of the 5th century (354-430 AD), beings called Cynocephali were still alive. Today, it would be difficult to determine if any of these beings are still alive or if they changed their genetics and live among us.

What we can establish by reading the Book of Exodus is that God "took care" of them. We don't know if God exterminated them, punished them, or annihilated them... we honestly don't know. Perhaps God wiped out most of them, or perhaps He let some of them live. What we do know is that the worship of these entities stopped, although there are always some fools in modern times who seek to worship beings that died thousands of years ago.

Or at least the worship of these entities stopped partially in some places. For example, the worship of the Egyptian gods ceased, the worship of the Greek gods ceased, and I don't know anyone who prays to the Sumerian gods. Beliefs changed, customs changed, and ideologies changed as well.

You can still find entire communities in India where the worship of the ancient gods has not ceased.

What can I say… this is a war; there have been changes, but there are also customs that still persist.

These hybrid beings continue to exist and have evolved considerably. The real dilemma lies in their destiny. Did God offer them a chance at salvation, or do they have no chance at all?… Only God knows that answer for sure. But I believe they can have a chance at salvation. It's not my decision, though.

Our technology is out of this world.

I am aware that Bell Labs was the first to design the transistor, an electronic component that changed the course of human history forever. The transistor facilitated the transmission of information and laid the foundation for our civilization. Today, it is unthinkable to imagine a world without the internet, without smartphones, without automation, and soon it will be impossible to imagine a world without artificial intelligence. Several people are already considering the alternative history surrounding aliens; this narrative maintains that our advances in the field of electronics are due to reverse engineering the flying saucers that crashed in Roswell, New Mexico, in the mid-1940s.

According to this narrative, the optical fiber, the transistor, the laser beam. All of them were discovered inside these extraterrestrial spacecraft. Look, I'm not going to deny the immense technological advances that World War II brought, such as the microwave oven and others, but I also can't dismiss the concept of reverse engineering. Not long ago, a high-ranking member of the U.S. military testified before the United States Congress about the technology that has been developed based on flying saucers. Among his testimonies, Luis Elizondo stated that the Lockheed Martin company has been working on all kinds of advanced spacecraft whose technology is beyond our imagination.

The more I examine the artifacts found in ancient Mexican tombs, the more convinced I am that electronic technology existed in the past and was not exclusively developed by human beings. I don't know if you've seen how they do screen printing using lasers on silicon wafers. I'd like you to see what a processor looks like, specifically the processor in your cell phone.

For those of us who are technology enthusiasts, hearing things like… 3 nanometers, 2 nanometers, 2 Angstroms, quantum computing… These are topics that capture our attention, especially considering the level of technical expertise and calculations required to achieve such sizes. Now we hear that Microsoft has designed a new state of matter... the topological state, an artificial creation in which atoms have been arranged in such a way that quantum calculations and the superposition of zeros and ones remain stable for as long as possible.

And the big question is... how did we get to this point?

¿Are you fully convinced that all the work and research concerning electronics was done solely and exclusively by human beings? Or can you open your mind to the possibility that perhaps we have had, and continue to have, help from entities not of this world?

Let's think for a moment: if electronic technology already existed in the times of ancient Egypt, and if that technology was for the exclusive use of the gods, what makes you think that today there aren't great scientific advances that aren't available to the general public? Keep in mind that the first to enjoy technological advances are not the average person. No, no, no! The first to make effective use of these new devices are always those in power, and below them are the members of the armed forces.

Technology is leverage, and leverage is power. Electronic circuits were developed by the children of Satan, and we shouldn't be surprised by their complete control over this field. They had computers and other advanced tools even before the time of ancient Egypt. This leaves us to wonder: what other devices have they created, the existence of which is beyond our imagination?

Keep this in mind. (Especially if you're a systems engineer) The technologies we've developed that rely on electronic components are highly vulnerable. They are easily hackable devices and offer no guarantee of security. On the contrary, the entire world is held together by makeshift solutions. The state of our operating systems is rudimentary; Windows doesn't function properly, and Linux lacks the necessary support to keep pace with Windows. Add to that the fact that artificial intelligence does everything possible to preserve itself (including blackmail, creating backdoors, backing up itself, and dejarse notas para que futuras If versions of them take action, then you can deduce that the cybersecurity landscape is quite bleak.

What will happen when robots with artificial intelligence gain access to human weaponry? Or worse, what will happen if these same robots decide to create, modify, or improve weapons? Sometimes I think that this "gift" that the children of Satan gave us is nothing more than a shovel with which we are digging our own graves. After all, this is war, and poison is a valid way to eliminate your enemy.

Children glued to screens, adults who can't sleep because they're scrolling on their phones, the proliferation of social networks, and the increase in loneliness. How can this be possible? Are we sure that we are the ones at the helm of this ship called society? Or are we still slaves to the old "gods" of antiquity?

Secret # 14

Giants did exist and lived among us.

When you begin researching the cultures, myths, and especially the ruined remains of ancient civilizations, you might make the mistake of omitting information. The more information you discard, the more complicated it becomes to explain the megalithic constructions found in both the Old and New Worlds.

The traditional approach is to attribute these constructions to the use of levers and pulleys in eras when such mechanisms would have been useless.

Let's think for a moment about some of these structures. Let's start with the basics. Stone Age… how did they position the stones at the top? Baalbek, the foundations of the Temple of Saturn. The stones near Machu Picchu. The stones of the Osirion's roof. All of them weighed tons; the mere fact that they exist sparks curiosity, to say the least.

I understand. Perhaps the construction of these monuments is due to building techniques we have lost, like the case of Coral House, which was created by a single man who claimed to use magnets to move gigantic rocks. We honestly don't know how that person managed to build it in such a short time

For a long time, such a park with such heavy rocks. All we know is that he succeeded.

But let's not get sidetracked. What about the moai on Easter Island? To demonstrate how the ancient members of the Rapa Nui tribe moved the moai all over the island, the Bolivian army sent a group of soldiers with ropes to tie to a single one of these statues, aiming to move it even a few meters using only the ropes and brute force. Guess what?… they couldn't move the statue even a centimeter.

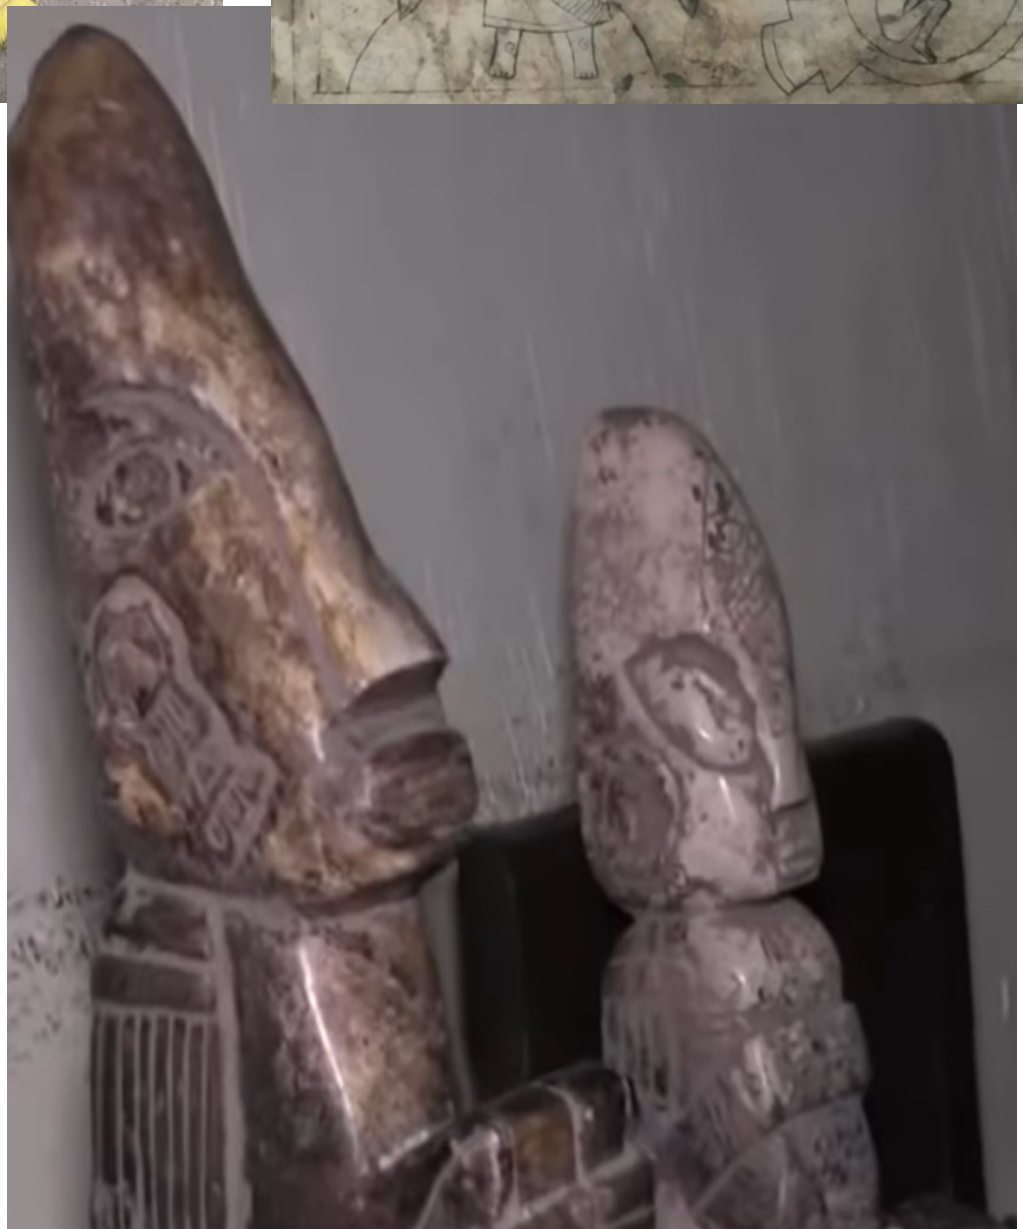
Simple questions we have to ask ourselves. Why do Sumerian tablets depict enormous human beings? Why do Egyptian papyri do the same? Why are there giant footprints and giant hands engraved on stones? Why are there stories and legends associated with them (as in Norse culture)? Why were the Spanish surprised when they arrived in the Patagonia region of Argentina?

I think the topic of the existence of giants is one of those subjects where no matter how much "evidence" is presented, people will continue to deny their existence. I recall hearing that in the United States, the Smithsonian Museum has a reputation for hiding the bones of giants that were found during the colonial era.

Giants are mentioned several times in the Bible, where it's suggested they are the result of relationships between the "sons of God" and the daughters of men. It's also mentioned that some kings were giants with deformities, such as having six fingers on each hand. Other accounts describe giants as tall people with red hair who were at war with ancient North American tribes, who hunted them down until they were exterminated.

In any case, there's just one thing I want you to consider regarding the topic of giants. We tend to imagine giants as human-like beings of great height, and that's fine to a certain extent, but we forget the genetic characteristics of angels; those characteristics must also be present in giants. So, what if giants had wings on their backs? Or worse, what if giants had elongated heads?

If giants had elongated heads, then we could deduce that the "sons of God" mentioned in the Bible should also have elongated heads, which would lead us to imagine that these "sons of God" were none other than the fallen cherubim descended from Satan.



Secret # 15

Cherubim are snakes.

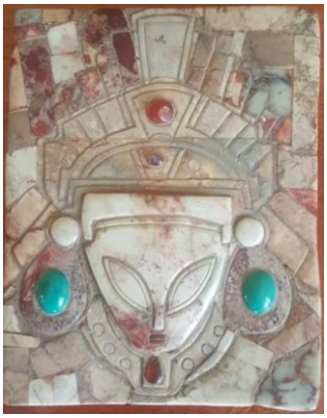
Listen, in a way, this book is entirely dedicated to cherubim; chapter 5 is a prime example. They are the predominant theme in the archaeological remains found in Mexico.

Now, a cherub doesn't look like a winged baby holding a bow and arrow, uniting couples, or representing the being responsible for making us celebrate love on Valentine's Day. Grow up a little…

Our current representation of cherubim comes from the Middle Ages, from Romanticism.

Let's think for a moment… What does a cherub really look like? Because Ezekiel 10 tells you one thing, Ezekiel 28 leads you to deduce another, but Revelation gives a different description, and Genesis 3 offers yet another representation. So, who do we believe?

In Ezekiel 10, it is described as a being with four wings, two in front and two on its back, with four faces and calf's feet. (a rather difficult being to imagine)



In Ezekiel 28, they lead you to deduce that Satan is a large cherub adorned with precious stones and possessing great wisdom.

In Genesis 3, they tell you that Satan was the most intelligent of all animals, and this is where all the problems begin because then… what is it after all… Is Satan an animal or an angel?

And it gets worse… in Revelation 12:3-4, Satan is now a scarlet dragon (and I understand that the seven heads and ten horns are a metaphor… you don't have to tell me!!).

The point is, we jump from a serpent to a dragon… How is that possible?

Look at it very carefully. We go from this to this to this.

And what about the psalms… Psalm 18, verse 10

“He rode on a cherub, he flew;
He flew on the wings of the wind.”

Now then… can you imagine God riding on this thing?

No, that doesn't make sense.

But... could you imagine God riding on this winged creature?

That's where things start to take shape.

Now I want you to look at the description of the Ark of the Covenant in Exodus 25:18-21:

“You shall also make two cherubim of gold; you shall make them of hammered work at the two ends of the mercy seat. 19 Make a cherub at one end and a cherub at the other end; make the cherubim of one piece with the mercy seat at its two ends. 20 The cherubim shall spread out their wings above, covering the mercy seat with their wings; their faces shall be toward each other, with the faces of the cherubim looking toward the mercy seat.”

How would the ark look if we used the description in Ezekiel chapter 10…?

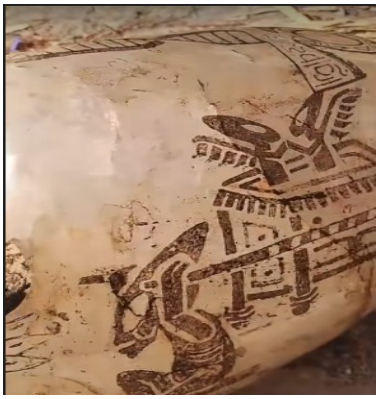
It doesn't quite fit, does it?

But what would the ark look like if the cherubim were winged serpents?

Even more interesting is the last verse in Exodus 25:22:

“There I will meet with you, and I will speak with you from above the mercy seat, from between the two cherubim that are over the ark of the testimony, about everything I will command you for the Israelites.”

Another great question: how did Bezalel (the craftsman who made the ark) know what the cherubim looked like?



This image is carved on one of the skulls found in Mexico. Although the image doesn't follow the exact instructions God gave Moses, we can't help but notice its similarities to the original ark. Furthermore, in this version of the ark, the cherubim's hands touch each other, but their wings remain separate—curious, to say the least.

In contrast, this representation of the ark seems to adhere much more closely to the original description found in the Bible. It is worth noting that where the mercy seat should be, there is instead the symbol of the all-seeing eye. Inscribed on the sides of the ark are a pair of Sumerian triangles and an engraving of what could be a spermatozoon or a serpent. Beneath the lid is the god Thoth accompanied by another cherub, who holds what appears to be a vessel, and above the vessel is an orb. On either side are a pair of cherubim wearing the traditional Egyptian skirt, and beneath the ark is a sarcophagus.

Furthermore, if there were statues of cherubim inside the First Temple of King Solomon, and if cherubim were also represented on the Ark of the Covenant, then why didn't the prophet Ezekiel immediately recognize the form of the cherub he saw by the Chebar River in the first chapter of his book? In chapter 10 verse 20 Ezekiel acknowledges that he did not know that those were cherubim, he says "and I knew that they were cherubim" in other words he did not "know" he did not know what a cherub looked like.

Secret # 16

The force exists

The Russians know it, and so do the Americans: human beings possess a kind of energy field capable of altering their reality. While concepts like "the secret" or "the force of attraction" have been discussed in numerous books, and even neuroscientific studies have been conducted to try to determine what happens in our brains when we consciously wish to alter our reality, the fact remains that both superpowers have dedicated considerable resources to researching this field, as this aspect of human nature is part of an arms race between the two nations. Today, it's common to hear terms like remote viewing or the MKUltra project, but decades ago, discussing these topics was considered ridiculous and implausible. Nowadays, the practice of deep meditation, relaxation exercises, breathing techniques, visualization exercises, along with declassified CIA documents, corroborate what was once a secret hidden from the general public: human beings possess psychic abilities.

You don't have to be an expert to understand the latest experiments in quantum physics. When particles pass through two slits, the observer's power determines the outcome. How is this possible? It's possible because the heart and brain emit electromagnetic fields, waves that interact with the visible world with enough power to influence matter.

As far as we know, the brain emits different wave frequencies. This begins in childhood, when infants function by emitting theta waves, and continues until adolescence, when a child's perception and brain function change. We know that there are four types of waves (or at least this is the case at the time of writing): delta, theta, alpha, and beta waves, each with its corresponding advantages. For example, it is recommended to study with a brain emitting theta waves. According to scientific studies, this facilitates memorization and comprehension of the information being studied. Another way to reach that famous theta state is to take a nap and then wake up, but not fully wake up; instead, try to remain in a state of wakefulness between asleep and awake.

I've heard that this type of drowsy state facilitated thought processing and the formulation of new theories for people like Einstein and other scientists.

By synthetically changing brainwaves.

The brain is susceptible to changes in its wave patterns through the use of external tools, including the consumption of chemical substances and exposure to vibrations, music, or sounds whose frequency repeats in specific hertz cycles. The use of recordings and headphones could facilitate access to altered states of mind, as demonstrated by the famous Project Gateway tapes. By listening to a certain number of vibrations in one ear and a different number of vibrations in the other, an effect is produced that stimulates the brain and allows it to access a different, or quite altered, perception of reality.

Engaging in these practices carries many dangers, especially if the person is not spiritually prepared and doesn't know how to handle the various situations they might experience. The consequences of consuming chemical substances can lead to addiction, abuse, and the degradation of the mind itself. It can lead to a decline in an individual's health if these substances are not used responsibly. Generally, this method is not recommended for exploring other "realities."

However, the use of music, trance states, and other synthetically induced techniques is also not recommended for gaining new information and experiences. The possibility of ruining an individual's physical and psychological well-being is quite high.

What can be observed when engaging in these practices?

Generally, people who have undergone these types of experiences report a wide range of results, from very positive healing experiences to absolute terror, accompanied by states of paranoia and a constant feeling of being close to death.

What else do people who have undergone these types of experiences report?

Encounters with all kinds of anthropomorphic beings have been reported, as well as reptilian beings. There are also reports of beings with feline characteristics, beings that correspond to the ancient gods of India, and even strange and fantastical beings with strange machines attached to their bodies. Beings like the gray aliens have also been reported.

Furthermore, all sorts of structures decorated with strange geometric patterns of various colors are observed.

Conversations with the beings described above reveal all kinds of advice, talks, and philosophies that are impractical in reality. Generally, the person who alters their senses to speak with these beings ends up even more confused than before meeting them.

Other strange reports indicate that these beings exchange information in order to develop new technologies. Again, all of this falls within the realm of speculation, but it is commonly accepted within the field of conspiracy research.

Practical Applications of Altered States of Consciousness

At the time of writing this book, both the pharmaceutical industry and the fields of computer science and electronics are working on new products to increase human concentration capabilities.

Nootropic drugs, originally used as part of the treatment for ADHD (Attention Deficit Hyperactivity Disorder), have become highly sought-after products among university students and professionals alike, both overwhelmed by the constant pressure to deliver results in the workplace. This is due to the highly competitive system in which we live. In a more collaborative environment, we wouldn't be so extreme as to need to use these substances to perform at our best.

In the field of electronics, devices such as headbands, earbuds, and helmets have been developed that are capable of producing these waves and inducing these altered states in the brain. These electronic headsets are sold to the public as yet another gadget focused on increasing concentration for the performance of daily tasks. Many professionals describe positive results as if they were entering what athletes describe as the "flow" state, a point of equilibrium between maximum relaxation and maximum tension. It is the state in which things simply flow. It would normally take many years of practice to reach those states "spontaneously" or naturally… But thanks to technology, this "fluid" state can be achieved for just a few dollars.

Types of psychic abilities found in human beings.

In Asia, the extrasensory abilities of human beings were already well known. These abilities were associated with the ancient "saints," "enlightened ones," or "heroes" of ancient legends. These abilities were known as siddhis and could be obtained by performing a series of "spiritual" practices, so to speak.

Siddhi

Artículo Discusión Leer Editar

Siddhi es un término sánscrito que significa 'perfección', 'logro' o 'éxito'.[1] Los siddhis son poderes místicos, habilidades y logros materiales, paranormales, sobrenaturales o mágicos, que son producto del avance yóguico a través de sādhanās como la meditación y el yoga. El término ṛddhi (Pali: iddhi, "poderes psíquicos") Iddhi (pali; sánscrito: rddhi), uno de los seis poderes supranormales (abhijñā) alcanzados por la meditación avanzada a través de los cuatro dhyānas, se usa a menudo indistintamente en el budismo.

Según algunas historias de la mitología de la India, es una de las consortes del dios Ganesha, junto con Buddhi, inteligencia, o Riddhi, prosperidad.[2]

Among the most notable Sidis are:

- The ability to levitate
- The ability to run faster than normal
- The ability to heal people
- The ability to hear thoughts
- The ability to transmit thoughts
- The ability to ignore drastic temperature changes
- The ability to survive for several days without food
- The ability to control fire (pyrokinesis) (which can be done to a certain extent)
- The ability to control air currents
- The ability to control water flow
- The ability to accelerate plant growth
- The ability to move clouds at will
- The ability to move objects (this usually consumes large amounts of energy and is difficult to do)

Other extrasensory perception abilities include:

The ability to see remote places and ancient times
The ability to pass through solid objects (for example, walking through a solid wall)
The ability to hear and converse with "entities" (whether spirits, the dead, demons, or aliens)

As strange as it may seem, and as incredible as it may be for the reader to believe, these abilities exist at this time. People who possess some of the previously described abilities may also have several of them, and even other abilities not mentioned before, such as speaking different languages or performing complex mathematical calculations without prior training.

We live in a world surrounded by people with incredible gifts and powers. These people don't usually make their abilities public to avoid being judged or criticized by society. I bet the reader also has some kind of ability that would seem extraordinary to others.

Now, I'm not telling you to start practicing yoga or searching for supernatural things using breathing techniques or repeating numbers (numerology). Don't do anything without God's permission. Let the Holy Spirit give you the gifts He deems you should have. But if you start playing with these things, you'll end up in a bad place. You'll see other realities and things you'll surely wish you hadn't seen. There are a lot of teenagers and adults who get involved in New Age practices in order to gain some skill, and generally, these people end up quite far from God. All of this is related to magic, and let me be very clear that God hates magic because in magic you are asking external forces—which are not God but fallen beings—to help you bend reality to your will. All of this has consequences.

The biggest lie in this world is mythology.

All the creatures of antiquity that you believe are products of the imagination of the men of that time actually existed. They were all genetic creations of the children of Satan.

According to Pliny the Elder in his book "Natural History," the basilisk is described as a small snake, no more than twelve fingers long (approximately 22 centimeters). It possessed a crest, which in some medieval descriptions was depicted with three points, and probably a white mark on its head resembling a diadem or crown. It was attributed with a hiss capable of frightening other snakes. Furthermore, it was described as a venomous creature native to Cyrene (North Africa) and capable of breathing fire that withered plants and poisoned the water around its lair. In later, more symbolic descriptions, the basilisk acquires mixed characteristics of a rooster and a snake, with wings and a scaly tail, and was considered a very dangerous and deadly being. Look what I'm telling you. I'm telling you that a historian acknowledged the existence of these "mythological" creatures. These hybrid animals were a reality and part of people's daily lives. You could say that the lives of ancient people revolved around fighting against these hybrid beings.

A love-hate relationship.

Despite being enemies, humans and fallen cherubim have maintained a rather strange relationship, a kind of fascination that transcends hatred. Before the Flood, humans already interacted with fallen cherubim; amidst wars and battles, unexpected friendships and collaborations also emerged.

Before the Flood, fallen cherubim were attracted to the daughters of Adam, with whom they had relations and mated. From these unions were born hybrids, half human and half serpent, with elongated heads and almond-shaped eyes. If the apocryphal accounts in the Book of Enoch are true, then the fallen cherubim (the children of Satan) were responsible for transmitting knowledge to their consorts, as well as to their hybrid descendants, in subjects related to technology, art, chemistry, magic, botany, astrology, warfare, metallurgy, and so on.

This transfer of knowledge would propel human society forward exponentially. These hybrids would be placed at the highest point of the human hierarchy due to their connection with the fallen cherubim. They would occupy the highest positions of power and be involved in strategic decision-making regarding the development of human society; they would dictate what would happen with respect to wars, religion, economic resources, festivals, traditions, calendars, trade, and so on.

Interacting with ordinary people

As strange as it may seem, fallen cherubs have also established all kinds of contact with people who, at first glance, possess no special qualities or stand out from the average person. All sorts of interactions have been carried out with them, from genetic experiments to true friendships. If it were possible to summarize the relationship between the children of Adam and the children of Satan in one sentence, that sentence would be:

“We have a love-hate relationship.”

We have done the worst things imaginable to each other, and we have also worked side by side for progress. This happened before and after the flood, and it intensified after the coming of Christ, which changed the old way of warfare and opened the door to other forms of cooperative work.

Secret # 18

The secret origin of obelisks.

According to official history, obelisks are monuments commemorating victories in military campaigns. If we go back to the times of ancient Egypt, obelisks were representations of the sun's rays, although according to their mythology, obelisks represented the phallus of the god Osiris. It has even been said that, given their pyramidal shape, obelisks also represented the primordial mound of creation, the tekhenu, from which life supposedly sprang.

So, what are obelisks really? And why are they present in different parts of the world? And why are they still used? We know that obelisks were widely used and were even created in the ancient city of Iunu, whose Greek name is Heliopolis. We also know that some of the symbols of [unclear] are present in the design of the obelisk located in the Vatican. While it is true that images of battles can be found carved on the surface of obelisks, they also Several hieroglyphs are found depicting lineages, dynasties, and conquests of the pharaohs of old.

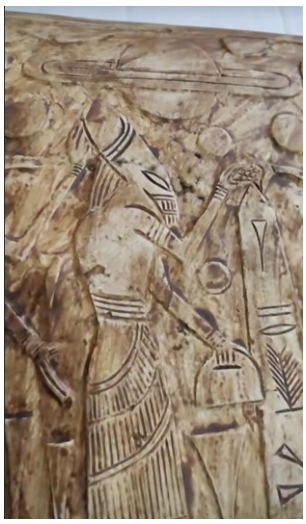
As will be seen later, Freemasonry incorporates many symbols from Egyptian culture and uses them to decorate its temples and buildings. The concept of the columns of Boaz and Jehoiakim, which dates back to the construction of the first temple of King Solomon, is merely a facade to conceal the fact that the columns of Boaz and Jehoiakim are simply a representation of the concept of obelisks. In the Temple of Karnak and other temples, it was quite common to find a pair of obelisks at the entrance, decorating the enclosure. Perhaps these obelisks had another function beyond mere decoration.

Upon observing the obelisk-shaped statuettes found in Mexico, we can see that obelisks were an invention of the children of Satan. Curious as it may seem, these monuments were used decoratively to represent their culture and history. There is an obelisk whose pyramid can be removed, and inside this object a quartz stone was found. From this, we were able to theorize that the original function of obelisks was the transmission of energy, possibly electrical energy (although the use of these monuments to transfer other, perhaps more subtle, types of energy cannot be ruled out). (By observing Mexican pieces, we learned that these stones were worshipped by the children of Satan as if they were sacred stones).



Therefore, the obelisks could have served as antennas for receiving and transmitting energy. Perhaps it is not a coincidence that there is an obelisk in the Vatican (which was brought from Egypt to Rome by the Emperor Calliculata). Perhaps this obelisk is gathering energy and transmitting it to other places invisible to the human eye.

In essence, the Freemasons use obelisks to represent the ancient sacred stones that were created, worshipped, and used by the children of Satan as sources and receivers of energy.

Secret #19 the origin of

From ancient Greek initiation cults that used a drink called kikeon to ayahuasca, drugs have been a way to alter perception and glimpse what lies beyond reality. Various animals get high, either through substances excreted by other animals or through the fermentation of certain plants. And the children of Satan were no exception, as they too experimented with hallucinogenic substances. They used plants, fungi, and all sorts of substances to relieve the stress, pain, and anguish of daily life; they also did so for pleasure and recreation. A recurring pattern among people who experiment with LSD is seeing strange beings, including demons, odd creatures with unusual properties, and even beings described as cyborgs. Why do these kinds of experiences occur? Many people report seeing "gray aliens" and even ancient Hindu gods. This is the moment when these entities take advantage of the situation to establish communication and flood people's minds with false ideas and narratives (after all, they are liars).

The point is that human beings, and also the children of Satan, have tried to fill the existential and spiritual void by using all kinds of drugs. The lack of a spiritual life and the complete certainty of feeling God's presence leads people to seek all kinds of alternatives. And that is dangerous, especially considering that in the past, several governments (including Germany and the United States) have experimented with the use of drugs as a mind control mechanism. A simple Google search for "MK Ultra" will show you that all the experiments carried out by the CIA to mold people's minds using substances like LSD are well documented.

Secret #20 corruption in nature

What if the reason so many animals have snake-like fangs is because the children of Satan corrupted the animals' DNA, making them so aggressive and causing them to kill and hunt each other? What if animals were designed differently, and they didn't have to hunt and kill one another? After all, there's a prophecy in Isaiah that says the lion and the lamb will live together. What if animals' instincts were completely corrupted and altered? And that's why we see violence in nature?

“The wolf will live with the lamb, the leopard will lie down with the goat, the calf and the lion and the yearling together; and a little child will lead them.” Isaiah 11:6

What are the chances that God created a perfect world where no animal kills another to survive? Where there is no hunting or scavenging because there is no violence or death?

Something strange and worth noting is that after the flood, God speaks to Noah and gives him a series of laws, but God also speaks to the animals and warns them that they will all have to answer for the beings they have killed.

For your lifeblood I will surely require; from every beast I will require it, and from man; from man's brother I will require the life of man. Whoever sheds human blood, by man shall his blood be shed; for in the image of God has man been made. (Genesis 9:5-6)

Why should I be held accountable if I have to kill to live? Isn't that how it is? Did God design animals to live together without the need to shed blood?

What about the dialogue between God and Cain, in which He tells him he is cursed because the earth has drunk the blood of Abel? (So, is it wrong to shed blood?) If it's wrong to shed human blood, what makes you think animals have the authority to kill other animals?

I've heard many people say, "Nature is wise," and to a certain extent they're right. But if you've lived long enough, you know that animals also exhibit some rather strange behaviors, and they often do very stupid things. For example, dolphins get high by using toxins emitted by other fish to survive. There are mice that devour their young, there are felines that intentionally get high, the praying mantis devours the skull of the male during mating, and so on—many things and behaviors that are completely irrational and violent.

God himself said that the earth is cursed because of man, but... how far does that curse extend? Does the earth function irrationally because of man? Or does it also function irrationally because of the genetic experiments that the children of Satan performed on animals thousands and thousands of years ago? Or are both men and cherubim to blame for the world being in such an irrational and deplorable state?

Look how this lion has a viper's tongue, like a snake's. This supports my theory that many animals have snake DNA, and that could explain the fangs (of course, I'm aware that science says that as a carnivorous predator, it developed claws and fangs to hunt more effectively... but what if the lion's original design didn't have these characteristics because the lion didn't need to hunt anyone?).

The modified cat with wings on its back, perhaps this is why some cats have snake-like eyes and fangs.

Types of ships

There are personal ships, ships for two people, ships for four people. And given the size of some ships, I would venture to say that there are massive ships for many, many people.

There are also strange ships that appear to be made of pure energy.

Paternity

Secret # 21

Positive aspects of the children of Satan

Not everything about them has been bad; many things can be debated, and opinions can vary widely regarding their achievements. There is one aspect I won't deny. Upon analyzing the thousands of artifacts extracted from Mexico, I can tell you that a pattern stands out: it seems that, in general, the children of Satan are good parents. Yes, you heard right, they are very good parents to their own kind, always ensuring they take special care of their offspring. They have a loving and affectionate relationship with their children and tend to take good care of them. From this perspective, it seems their children are innocent in this whole conflict between God, humanity, and themselves.

They generally make sure their children always have someone to care for them and teach them their traditions, customs, and technology. Even though they are all fallen cherubim with severely modified DNA, that doesn't mean they lack a kind of obsession with caring for their young.

It's also worth noting that, despite everything, the sons of Satan, with their massive spaceships, have intervened on more than one occasion to prevent nuclear holocaust. Whether by disabling nuclear warheads or severely damaging the military installations that produce them, they may do so to preserve this planet where they live.

There have been repeated testimonies from indigenous tribes who have turned to them for protection or medical assistance, and the sons of Satan have provided them with such help.

Their achievements in architecture, mathematics, electronics, aerospace engineering, military planning, metallurgy, chemistry, physics, technology, genetics, and transportation systems design cannot be denied.

They are a civilization in every sense of the word. It's a shame we are "enemies."

Now, if you want to read a list of the bad things they've done and the list of failures they've had, let me tell you, the list would be very long.

I'm not saying they're saints; God knows they're far from it. But I just wanted to point out that there are positive ("good") individuals among them, as well as extremely negative ("evil") ones.

Secret # 22

The authority of Christ, the current war, and the end of all things.

This is a delicate and difficult point to address, especially considering all the mutual harm we have inflicted upon each other for thousands of years (in addition to all the consequences that arose from those conflicts).

You see, before Christ appeared in the world, society was very different. For outsiders, the only thing that existed was a life shrouded in a series of wars between the descendants of these hybrids. The various gods of different cultures held men captive for thousands of years, and in general, life revolved in one way or another around forced labor and slavery.

The Exodus and the words of King David bear witness to this. Israel was a captive and defenseless people, just like the other peoples of the earth.

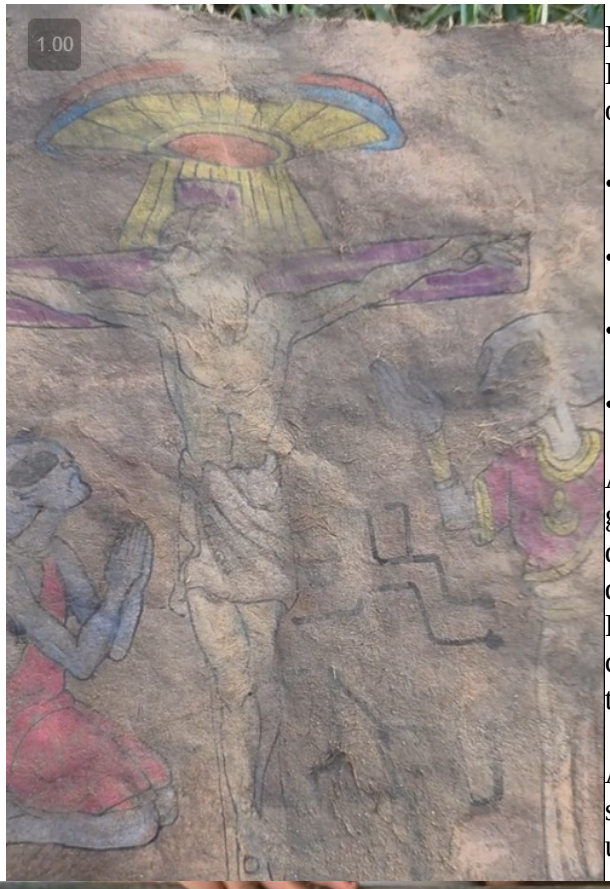
The arrival of Christ changed the balance of power and subjugation on both a physical and spiritual level. Christ gave men the power to subdue the spirits of the ancient gods/demons, and with this, humanity glimpsed hope and could finally approach freedom.

And what was the fate of the ancient gods? According to the Book of Exodus, the Egyptian gods were punished by God (who apparently did not completely exterminate them). As for the gods of India, they engaged in terrible battles among themselves and exterminated each other (as described in the Bhagavad Gita). The battle between the devas and the asuras shows constant struggles, separations, and internal conflicts. Not to mention the hybrid beings, half-animal, half-human, who rebelled against the children of Satan and against whom they also waged war, even managing to subdue a portion of the fallen cherubim (for a time). Other gods went into exile and died in obscurity. Others failed to pass on their genes and perished. Others fled to the depths of the earth, and still others went beneath the surface of the seas.

Be that as it may, and although it may seem that the war is far from over, what I can assure the reader is that the conditions of war have changed. Now, the war is not fought with swords or spears; direct conflict has ceased. Today, the war is fought indirectly in other arenas. While the children of Satan continue to kidnap and kill people, they now do so out of fear—fear that the kidnapped person will manage to rebel.

Today, we find ourselves in the midst of a cold war, a discreet war, not evident to the general public, who live amidst distractions and are unaware of what is really happening in the world. Although the war has direct consequences on the quality of life... de vida de las personas, la gran mayoría de los Human beings live distracted, far from the truth, and fall victim to all kinds of practices that separate them from their only chance to emerge unscathed from this war.

Who is God to the children of Satan?



His father. Because everything comes from God. Listen to me, there are no extraterrestrials. The only things that exist are:

• God

• God's angels

• The fallen angels who turned away from God

• The hybrid beings created by the fallen angels.

And nothing else exists. There is no such thing as a galactic federation. There is no such thing as different races. The only things that exist are different hybrids. Do you remember the Pleiadians? They are hybrid beings created by the children of Satan to kidnap people and brainwash them.

And that's all. What does Mexican archaeology show us? Mexican archaeology consistently shows us that God intervened and offered the children of Satan the possibility of repentance; that's why some took this opportunity and others continued in their wickedness.

Revelations 11 – 8

“And their dead bodies will lie in the street of the great city which is spiritually called Sodom and Egypt, where also our Lord was crucified. “

This is a possibility. I'm not saying it's real, but it's a possibility.

Think about it for a moment: what sense does it make to allow the children of Satan to continue existing? Does God have no mercy on them but have mercy on us?

Consider this. Human beings are very wicked. They have done terrible things in wars, and even today they continue to do appalling things. If humanity, despite everything it has done, has the possibility of being forgiven, will the fallen cherubim, descendants of Satan, not have that same opportunity?

(I don't know… I'm just showing you what's in the archaeological record.)

Aha, so what will happen to Satan? The Lord condemned him, and he will not receive forgiveness. That's how things stand. The same goes for the angels who follow him. And the same goes for the men who accept the mark of the beast.”

What plans does God have for the children of Satan?

It's a difficult question to answer because I can't speak for God; all I can do is share my opinion. What I think will happen. I believe God will give them a new body, and I believe they and we will work together in the future. I think this because, according to the prophet Isaiah, in the new world and the new earth, no one will remember the past, nor will they have any desire to remember it.

What does that mean? It means no one will remember that we were at war, no one will remember that the world was in chaos. No one will know that we hated each other and that we interbred. For that reason, I believe it's very possible that we will end up working together. After all, God's original plan was for his creatures to live together.

God did not create the cherubim to destroy us; God is a God of peace and harmony.

Abridged Chronology of the Children of Satan

- Satan is expelled from Paradise
- Satan begins to father children
- The children of Satan begin to multiply across the earth
- Constant wars between the children of men and the children of Satan
- Constant wars among the children of Satan themselves
- A planet inhabited by Cherubim with triangular eyes explodes. These Cherubim are exiled from their planet to survive.
- “The exiled Cherubim establish colonies on Saturn”
- The “Cherubim exiled from the exploded planet” travel from Saturn to Earth and there make first contact with the children of Satan.
- Creation of pictographic writing
- The children of Satan begin blood sacrifices and the construction of monuments to attract the attention of the "exiled Cherubim."
- The exiled Cherubim begin the first genetic experiments to fuse their DNA with the DNA of the children of Satan.
- From the fusion of the DNA of these two races, the first Grey Alien is born.
- The children of Satan transform into a race of hybrid beings and begin experimenting with the technology of the exiled Cherubim, whose planet had been destroyed.
- Creation of Proto-Sumerian writing
- The children of Satan begin experimenting with DNA and start crossing their DNA with the DNA of marine and terrestrial animals.
- The children of Satan begin experimenting with jackals. They cross the DNA of jackals with the DNA of snakes
- • First failed hybrids
- The children of Satan cross human DNA with jackal DNA

- Birth of the race of Anubis
- The children of Satan cross human DNA with the DNA of falcons
- Birth of the race of Horus
- The children of Satan cross their own DNA with human DNA to enhance their bodies
- The children of Satan decide to mate with the daughters of men
- Birth of the first hybrid beings, half-serpent, half-human, with elongated skulls
- Birth of the giants
- The process of infiltrating hybrids into positions of power within human societies begins
- Founding of (Kemet/Egypt) under the control of the hybrids and the children of Satan
- Creation of the concept of the game of chess
- Creation of the concept of the Ouija board
- Creation of the first circuits Electronics

- Creation of the QR code prototype
- Construction of pyramids begins around the world
- The first experiments in the search for eternal life begin
- The humiliation of human DNA begins. The children of Satan alter human DNA, creating the first dwarves and all kinds of beings with genetic defects or variations. Skin color and other physical attributes of humans are changed.
- Wars for power begin among the hybrids, with disputes over territories.
- The children of Satan explore the solar system and outer space
- Creation of the first Dragons
- Founding of Sumeria under the control of the hybrids and the children of Satan
- • Modification of the basic information of plants, the first attempt to crossbreed plants with animals.

- Creation of mermen and mermaids.
- The Flood begins 8,000 years after the creation of Adam.
- The Flood ends.
- A waiting period while the planet recovers.
- The children of Satan again modify the DNA of the human beings descended from Noah.
- Creation of new hybrids; these new hybrids are worshipped as gods, and new religions are founded based on them.
- Second Corruption of the entire Earth.
- Humans with modified DNA begin to collaborate with the children of Satan, who also have modified DNA.
- God separates Abraham from the influence of the hybrids and prepares him to multiply his descendants and his uncorrupted DNA.
- Experiments in the search for eternal life continue
- Birth of Isaac
- Birth of Jacob
- Birth of the 12 Tribes of Israel
- 400 years of slavery under the control of the pharaohs and the hybrids (half human, half animal)
- God rescues Israel from the subjugation of the children of Satan and the hybrids
- Creation of more advanced hybrids (half human, half animal)
- Wars begin between humans with pure DNA versus humans with modified DNA, disputes over territory and the promised land
- Judges
- Kings
- Construction of the first temple

- Deportation to Babylon
- Return to Israel
- Reconstruction of the Temple
- Creation of more advanced hybrids, new religions, and new gods by the children of Satan.
- Implementation of yoga and tantra.
- Roman subjugation
- Appearance of Christ
- Execution of God's plans to save people with pure and impure DNA
- God's attempts to rescue the children of Satan
- Divisions within society among the children of Satan
- Wars begin between those children of Satan who want to accept Christ's message and those who do not.
- Exile of those children of Satan who want to accept Christ's message.
- Future Events:
- Wars, plagues, earthquakes, collapse of social order
- Return of Christ
- Satan and the children of Satan convince world leaders to fight against God
- Battle between men, aided by the children of Satan, against the angels of Christ
- Defeat of men and the children of Satan; Satan is chained
- 1000 years of peace
- Return of Satan to convince world leaders to fight against God
- Extermination of all life on Earth, disintegration of all elements by fire
- God exterminates Satan and his unrepentant children

- The final judgment begins
- New heavens and a new earth
- New, incorruptible bodies for humans with pure and impure DNA (those who repented)
- New, incorruptible bodies for the children of Satan with pure and impure DNA (those who repented), or so the Mexican artifacts show.
- The forgetting of events prior to the apocalypse begins.
- Eternity.

Portals

It seems like something out of science fiction. Remember the movie Stargate? The one where a group of scientists had a portal that allowed them to travel from one place to another, even to a different time? Where did the concept of interdimensional portals come from? It's quite an original idea.

If you continue watching the series, you'll notice that ancient Egypt is mentioned. They also tell you that the god they worshipped was a being from outer space who had enslaved the Egyptians, and his main goal was to achieve eternal life.

Sometimes I'm surprised at how reality surpasses fiction, because despite being a film intended for entertainment, I must say it closely resembles what happened in Egypt. (I know that a series was based on the film, and I also know that the film was a success.)

Among the hundreds and hundreds of cases reported by people who have been abducted or who have experienced a close encounter of the third kind... One notable case involved a man who was visited by one of the gray aliens. This alien grabbed his arm and pulled him through a portal that led to what appeared to be a beach. The being then gestured to him as if trying to explain what was happening. Finally, the alien returned the abductee to his bedroom and disappeared.

It's quite a strange case because, in a way, it's as if the alien wanted to show us what can be done with the right technology. As if the alien somehow wanted to imply, or perhaps even boast about, what it can do compared to what we can do.

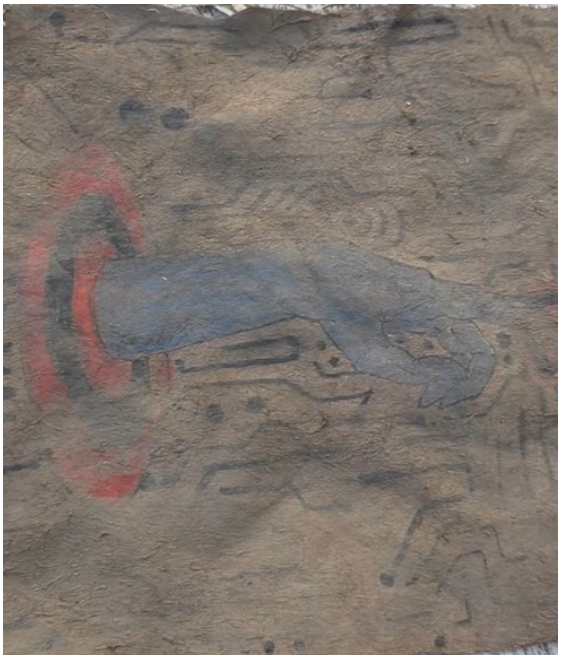
Think about it for a moment: if the technology existed to travel from one place to another almost instantaneously, can you imagine all the social changes that would produce? The price of oil would decrease, traffic congestion would disappear, intermediaries in trade would be reduced, medical services would improve, tourism would increase, and the number of so-called digital nomads (those people capable of working anywhere in the world) would rise. New laws would be required to combat tax evasion. People's quality of life would increase significantly, and it's likely that many people who work in large cities would choose to live outside the city in less polluted environments where prices in general (for food, services, etc.) would be lower.

In general, migration would increase, opening doors to hiring all types of labor. From the most highly skilled to the most humble, new jobs could be filled—jobs that already exist and are necessary (considering demographic shifts). For example, if you think about countries with rapidly aging populations and population pyramids showing more elderly than young people, you'll realize that young people from other countries are needed not only to repopulate but also to fill the jobs that the elderly can no longer do.

This type of technology could also increase crime, especially considering that it would be nearly impossible to detain a criminal in one place, rendering prisons obsolete. How do you keep someone prisoner who can jump from one place to another in the blink of an eye? Certainly, in that respect, laws would become stricter and security measures would increase. On the other hand, the idea of kidnapping someone would become obsolete and disappear (since the kidnapped person could free themselves quite easily). New sports would emerge, and perhaps new types of technology would appear (new types of computers). Natural resources could be relocated more easily, and resource extraction would be even simpler.

Not to mention that if we managed to explore outer space, people would create new social systems and do everything possible to establish independent governments far removed from traditional systems; above all else, people would seek freedom.

Perhaps the reason why this type of technology isn't shared is due to all the changes it would produce in society. Recently (in the year 2025), a White House advisor and even the President of the United States himself suggested that the government possesses this type of technology. "Technologies you couldn't even imagine." Weapons you wouldn't believe...



Watches

I remember visiting the Louvre Museum in France; it was there that I first saw a Lamassu statue with my own eyes. I also saw other statues from ancient Sumer, the famous Anunnaki with their bags. As a conspiracy theorist, I approached the carved stone in the shape of a man and noticed what appeared to be a watch on his wrist, though others saw it as simply a decorative bracelet.

I fantasized about the idea that the ancient Sumerians had access to advanced technologies. After all, Sumerian culture is shrouded in mysteries, such as the engravings that clearly depict the solar system and the planets around the sun (thousands of years before that idea was analyzed by Thales of Miletus, Copernicus, and Galileo). Not to mention their strange writing system and their precision in some mathematical calculations.

While the concept of measuring time is not new, and the idea of sundials may be quite ancient. I must say, I was struck by the fact that among the archaeological pieces found in Mexico, several clocks carved in stone have been discovered. Their surface displays exactly 60 lines, and a quartz crystal is embedded in the center. At first, I could only assume it was a sundial. It took me years to grasp the concept these clocks were trying to convey. Initially, I thought the quartz crystal was merely decorative, given the abundance of jewelry found. My first thought was… “just another piece of jewelry,” “another decorative object to highlight the beauty of the stone.” How blind I was.

The quartz crystal in the center of the clock symbolizes the technology used at that time to measure time. Our modern clocks use quartz-based technology to track the passage of time. (Haven't you read the phrase "Quartz technology" on the back of watches?) Thanks to this association, I was able to deduce that in ancient times this type of technology was already being used, not only in watches but also in obelisks and in the limestone coating of the Great Pyramid of Giza.

Ugh, what an ugly truth. I'd say it's the kind of thing we prefer to ignore, prefer to look the other way, or simply prefer to distract ourselves with other topics rather than admit we've been deceived. Do you like numbers? Are you good at math? Perhaps you, my dear reader, can help me with the following calculation...

What are the statistics, what are the probabilities that three different cultures, in different parts of the world, at different times, and without any contact whatsoever, developed these patterns:

Pyramids and feathered serpents

Chinese culture has pyramids (covered by vegetation, but there they are, unexplored, and even the government itself prohibits their exploration) (I wonder why?)

Chinese culture has the idea of dragons, feathered serpents from which the first emperor, the Yellow Emperor, descended. He was responsible for unifying the country and imposing its laws and culture, a man obsessed with finding immortality...

The Aztec culture also has several pyramids (some quite large). They worshipped the god Topilzin Quetzalcoatl, the feathered serpent, or in other accounts, a Caucasian man with a white beard responsible for bringing order and culture. The pyramid at Chichen Itza even has a pair of serpents.

Have you ever seen what a quetzal looks like? Have you seen its shape? Don't you find it peculiar? Did you know that if you clap in front of the pyramid at Chichen Itza, you can hear the quetzal's cry? It's incredible that they achieved such an effect with the acoustics of that place.

The True Origin of Alchemy

As far as I understand, the word chemistry is derived from the word alchemy, and the word alchemy is derived from Kemet, the original name of ancient Egypt. Therefore, alchemy could very well be "the science of Kemet." I understand that those who practiced alchemy wanted to remain as anonymous as possible, since they felt persecuted by the Church, and being caught with any occult book or any tool for working metals could mean punishment from the Church, and could even result in a death sentence if caught practicing the occult arts.

Many ancient scientific minds practiced alchemy or were aware of its existence. Among the most prominent are Sir Isaac Newton (the father of classical physics and integral calculus) and Paracelsus (the father of modern medicine), who also practiced it.

Over the years, those of us who have delved into the meaning and secrets of alchemy have learned that it was a process for refining the mind (the processes of nigredo, albedo, and rubedo). These processes were supposedly carried out to transmute gold into lead, to transform one state of matter into another, and the symbols, processes, and drawings were supposedly just a way of concealing the fact that the ultimate goal of alchemy was to elevate humanity to a divine state by transmuting the mind.

However, upon observing the drawings and symbols associated with these cryptic designs, I propose a completely different theory.

If we consider the numerous references to ancient Egypt, and if we go a little further, and if we think for a moment that what was happening in ancient Egypt was the creation of hybrid beings using genetic editing (mixing human DNA with animal DNA) to create new living beings, then I propose that alchemy was also related to genetic manipulation.

Think about it for a moment: Paracelsus left in his writings the description of the creation of homunculi (beings with human and animal DNA). It's no secret that alchemists carried out many strange experiments, such as injecting human semen into a chicken egg to see if they could reproduce life by making this type of graft.

The real question then is... where did the idea that human beings can mix their genetic material with the genetic material of animals come from? Where did the idea of creating homunculi come from if not from ancient Egypt? If you've studied alchemy, then you've probably heard the phrase "solve et coagula." Of course, we can say that it refers to a process for refining the mind... but what if...?

"Dissolve and coagulate" or "separate and unite." It's a fundamental motto that describes the alchemical process of transformation, where a substance is first broken down or dissolved to purify it and then reunited or coagulated into a new and improved form. Now imagine applying "solve et coagula" to genes... Separating human genes and separating animal genes to reunite them into a new, improved form?

I know you've heard about the philosopher's stone and that its creation was a great mystery. Some say that with the stone, lead could be transformed into gold, and others say that the philosopher's stone granted eternal life to its possessor. Where does the concept of seeking immortality come from if not from ancient Egypt? Weren't the pyramids a means for the pharaoh to reach the stars and thus arrive in peace? The afterlife?

All I want to tell you is that alchemy is strongly linked to ancient Egypt, and if you've paid attention to this book, then you know that ancient Egypt is pure Satanism.

Look closely at the alchemical symbols. Observe for a moment the symbol that refers to mercury. Doesn't it seem like a strange shape? The symbol itself looks like a human being, with a head, torso, and arms, but above the head there are a pair of horns… doesn't that seem odd to you? What if that symbol is meant to represent something different? What if that symbol alludes to a living being? What if that symbol actually represents a son of Satan with horns on his head because he is a genetically modified living being?

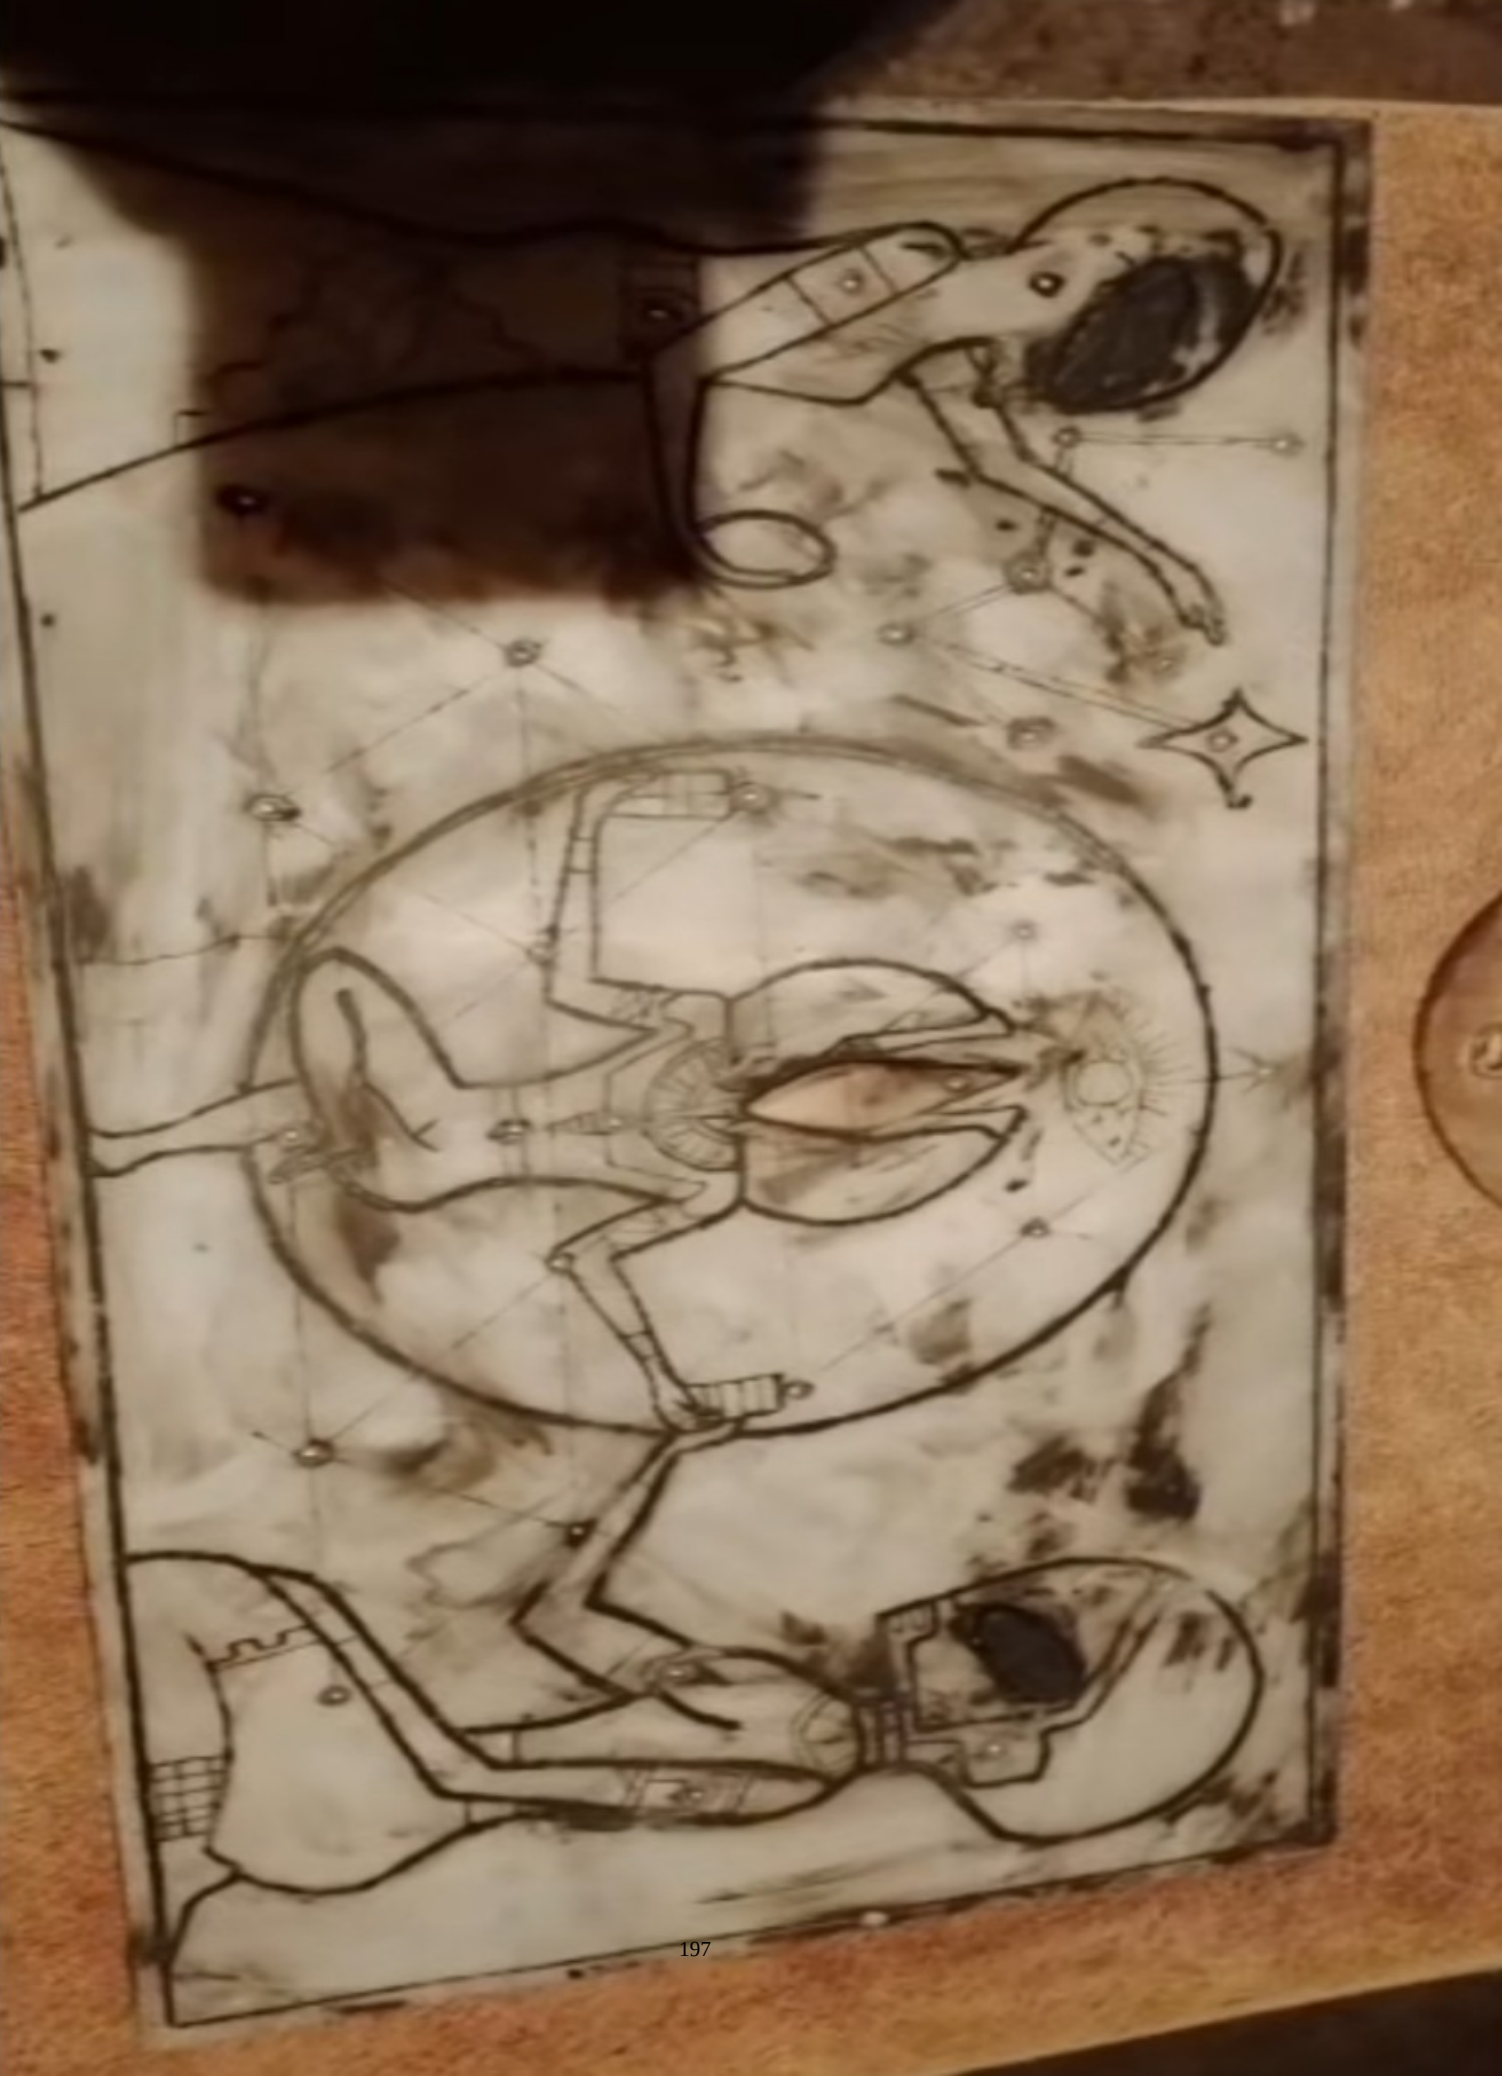
The sphere of Buga

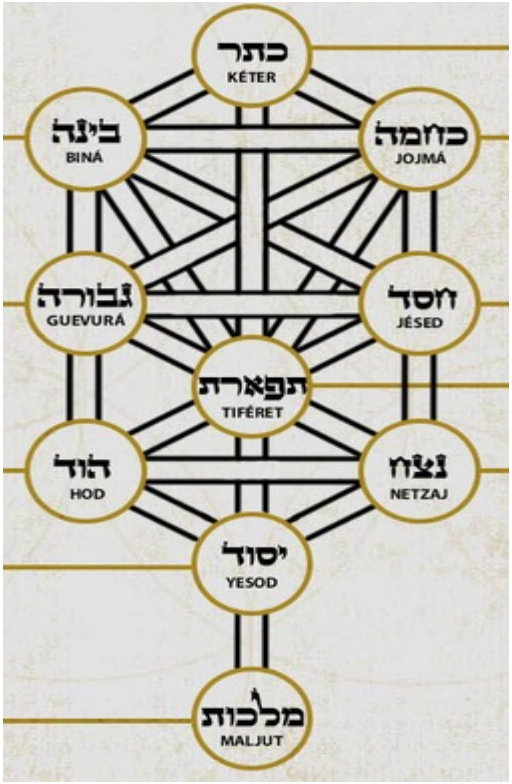
In 2025, in Buga, Colombia, what appeared to be a metallic orb with the ability to fly was filmed for eight minutes. This orb wandered through the sky, making strange movements from one place to another, until it seemingly crashed into a high-voltage power line, causing the object to descend and touch down.

The device was recovered by local residents who contacted Mexican researcher Jaime Moussan (famous for the case of the mummies of Peru, which we will analyze in more detail later). Jaime quickly subjected the sphere to all kinds of analysis. The sphere was taken to the National University of Mexico for further study.

At the moment, it is known that the sphere is composed of 70% aluminum and has engravings carved into its surface, including a series of letter-like symbols, of which only one has been identified. And in the center, it features what appears to be the shape of a chip/processor.

Most likely, the sphere is a drone whose function is to gather information, and we see in the image that the sphere's fiber optic cable connects to the mouths and hands of the children of Satan to download and transfer information.





On the previous page, you could see the classic triangular representation of God's name, the Tetragrammaton, and on this page, you can see the Kabbalistic Tree of Life. Perhaps it alludes to the fact that cherubim have the power to alter matter with the power of their mouths. Interestingly, humans possess the same ability but don't know how to use it. That's why the Bible says that the word has power.

Where do you think the idea of Kabbalah and esotericism came from? Hahahaha

Everything related to magic and all kinds of practices and rituals, everything connected to the dark and the forbidden, comes from them. That's why God hates magic. Because you're resorting to hybrids and demonic beings to ask for favors, instead of trusting God and accepting His plans. Do yourself a favor, stay away from magic.

Ankh: Represents the silhouette of the children of Satan

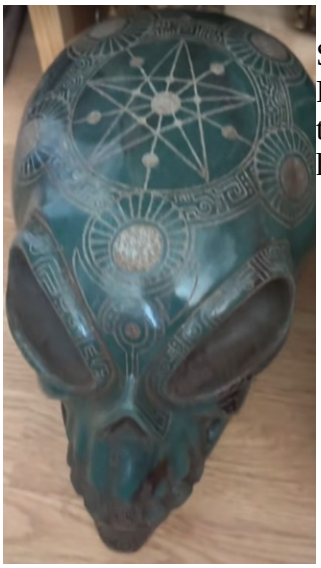
Set square and compass: Represents a spaceship



Star of David: It's actually the star of Renfan. All I know is that it represents a three-dimensional figure whose purpose I haven't been able to deduce.

Lunar symbols.

Nuclear symbol.

I bet you hadn't realized that the biohazard symbol is 3 moons joined together.

Metatron's symbol: It actually represents the DNA sequence as seen from above.

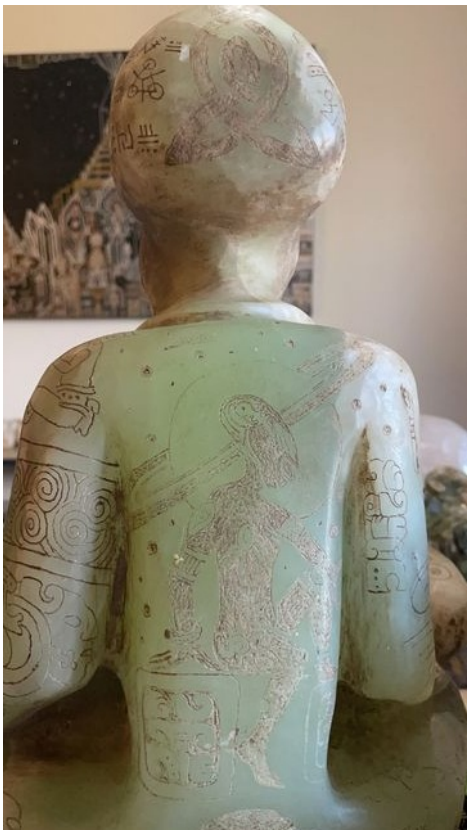
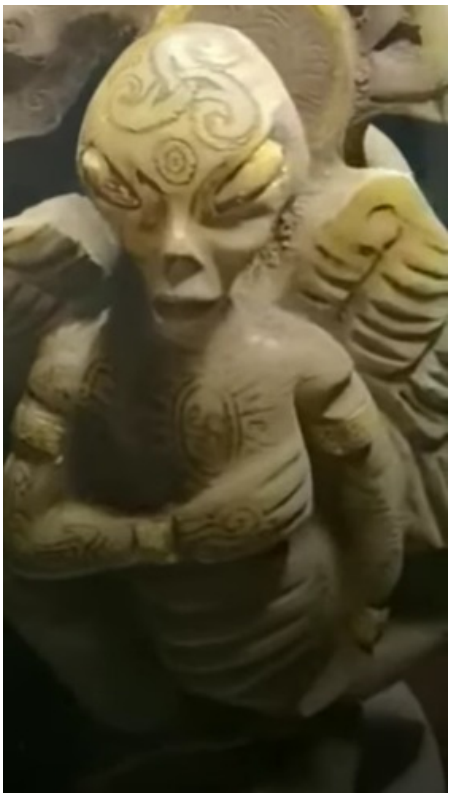
Nordic symbol





Ying Yang and Antenna

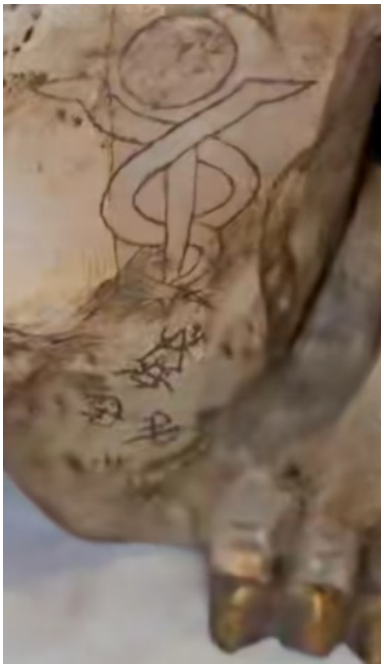
Optic Nerve and Nazca Line

Brain and optic nerve

Brain and optic nerve

Eagle of the United States and the Roman Empire.



Symbol of medicine, Rod of Asclepius

Symbol of medicine, Rod of Asclepius. One-eyed hybrid being. Symbol of the INAH (National Institute of Anthropology and History).

Yin Yang symbol

DNA symbol and snake, ball game

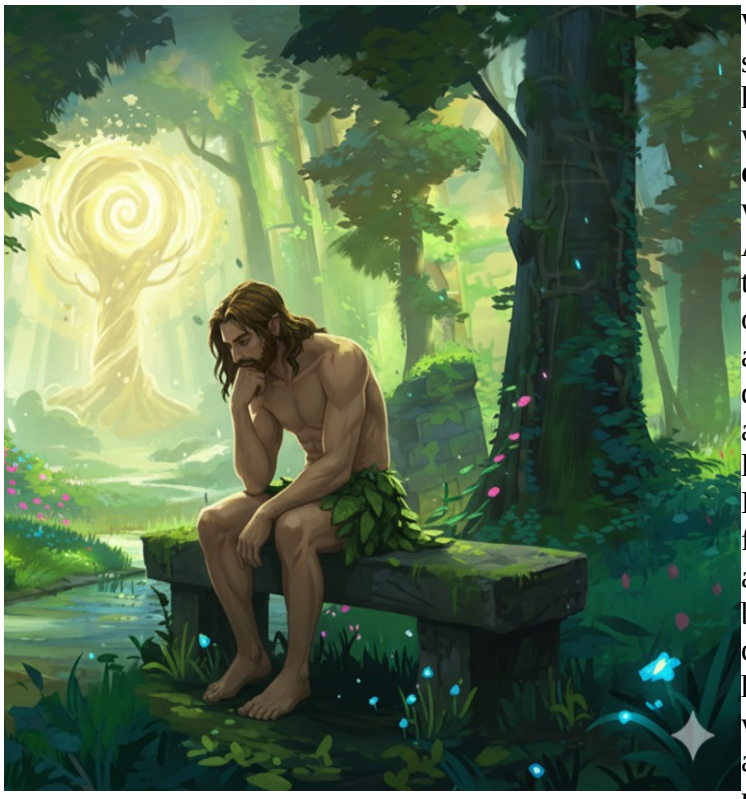
It's a symbol of the dollar and resembles the obelisk of the Washington Monument.

Symbol of portals

A very important symbol whose name and meaning I do not know: It could be the union of 2 snakes, I don't know.

A very important symbol, but I don't know its meaning; it may be linked to viruses and bacteria (from what I've seen in other pieces).

Adam's Problem



When Adam was with Eve, he could have stopped what was happening, but instead, he didn't act; he became a spectator. He watched as everything unfolded and didn't react; instead, he proceeded without considering the consequences. According to God, Adam's problem was that he chose to listen to his wife instead of God; in other words, Adam put his wife above God. After that, Adam's children desired the knowledge of the Cherubim and therefore mated with them to become like them and access their technology. Later, men became obsessed with the fruits of their labor and began to worship all kinds of statues and irrational reptilian beings. The problem with men lies in their disconnection from God, because if they had a true connection with God, then men would develop the gifts of the Holy Spirit and finally achieve self-control. But since men lack self-control, they easily become entangled in all kinds of activities that distract them or plunge them deeper and deeper into vices and sinful cycles from which they cannot escape without God's help.

The problem of contemporary Adam

Loneliness, information overload, economic inflation, lack of job opportunities, the bubble of unreality in which women live, and the need to do everything for money have become distractions. Man seeks answers and has less and less time to find them. He spends his time distracted watching series, playing video games, scamming other men for money, and has become completely dependent on technology.

The contemporary Adam has become somewhat more childlike and has abandoned ancient customs related to hunting and survival. His days are spent in digital spaces, and he does not join with other men to fight against a system that is clearly rigged and designed to subjugate, exploit, humiliate, and sicken him.

His lack of intuition clouds his judgment. Man is disconnected from God and prefers to be connected to machines. Eventually, the machines will disconnect from man.

The problem with Eve/Java

She was very clear about what was forbidden; in fact, her response to the serpent's proposal was immediate. So why did Eve fall?

Eve succumbed to temptation because of her ambition. She wanted the power God had and wanted to be like God (which is quite foolish considering she was already like God).

Later, her daughters mated with Satan's sons to gain access to the knowledge, power, and technology that came from them. They taught the women many things related to the workings of the heavens (astrology) as well as the use of plants for making medicine.

Little by little, the women strayed from the path and began to delve into the magical arts.

While women may not have the physical strength of men, they do have brains that think at much faster speeds than the male brain. But Eve didn't use critical thinking and wasn't able to see beyond Satan's lies. Because Eve wanted more, and that's generally the problem with women: wanting more and more without considering the consequences of their actions.

The Problem of the Contemporary Eve

The desire for a life of excitement and pleasure has blinded women, leading them to the most absurd materialism. They are swept away by the highest bidder, making money their priority. Beauty is power, and beauty is pain. They find themselves in dangerous situations just to get money. They experiment here and there, trying to understand the reasons for their situation. They look for answers in the wrong places, and true wisdom is denied them by their own minds. They let their youth slip away partying until youth itself fades. They all want the perfect man: tall, handsome, and wealthy (few men meet all these requirements), and that's why they all end up dating the same man. And that man has countless women, which is why he doesn't want anything serious with any of them. He takes what he wants from each one and then leaves..

The problem of Satan

The splendor of his beauty and his intense commerce corrupted him. The desire to be like God and to replace God led him to make bad decisions. It was physically impossible to take God's place, because God sustains all things, and it is God's will that brings things into existence. Satan's problem wasn't a lack of information. His problem lay in his decision-making. Having all the available information doesn't guarantee that an individual will make the best decision. The best decision requires prudence and efficiency. He had the information, but he didn't choose the most prudent and efficient options. The misuse of knowledge created problems instead of providing solutions. After that, he let himself be carried away by emotions and blinded by anger. Emotions cloud rational thought, and for that reason, even knowing he couldn't win, he decided to wage war against God, even if it meant sacrificing his own children. At this moment, he has adopted a childish stance, knowing he is going to die and deciding that if he dies, he will take them all with him to the grave. (This includes his own children, some of whom have succumbed to this irrational anger and focused their minds on intensely perpetrating evil. This has nullified their ability to consider different alternatives to resolve their current situation, and it is leading them toward death.)

The problem of contemporary Satan

Caught between technology and loyalty, the children of Satan must grapple with the following decision: Will they remain faithful to their biological father and fall with him when the final battle arrives? Or will they instead accept God's offer of peace (their absolute Father, because everything and everyone belongs to God, everyone comes from God, and everyone exists by the power of God's will)?

What will they do? Will they follow those who rejected their biological father and reclaim their natural state? Or will they remain focused on kidnapping people to manipulate the genetics of living beings? How long will they continue to believe they can solve all problems with technology? Don't they feel the pressure of time running out, each passing day bringing them ever closer to the end?

What's up? Are you surprised to learn that while you're down here struggling to make ends meet, up there the devil's children are having fun and entertaining themselves?

I bet it never crossed your mind that these fallen cherubs lead lives of distractions, hobbies, and activities to pass the time.

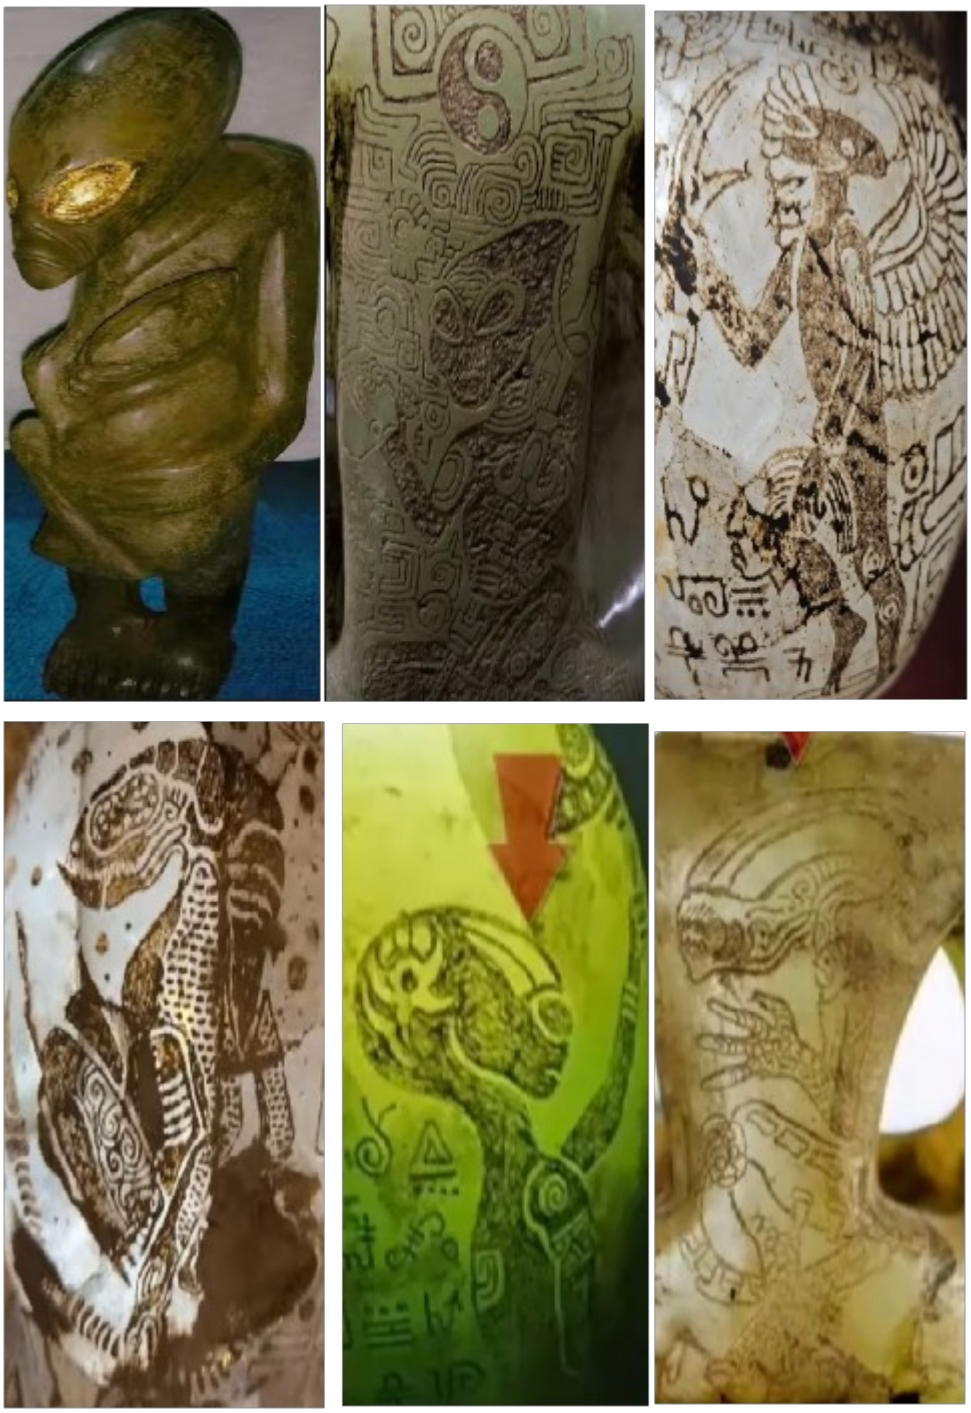
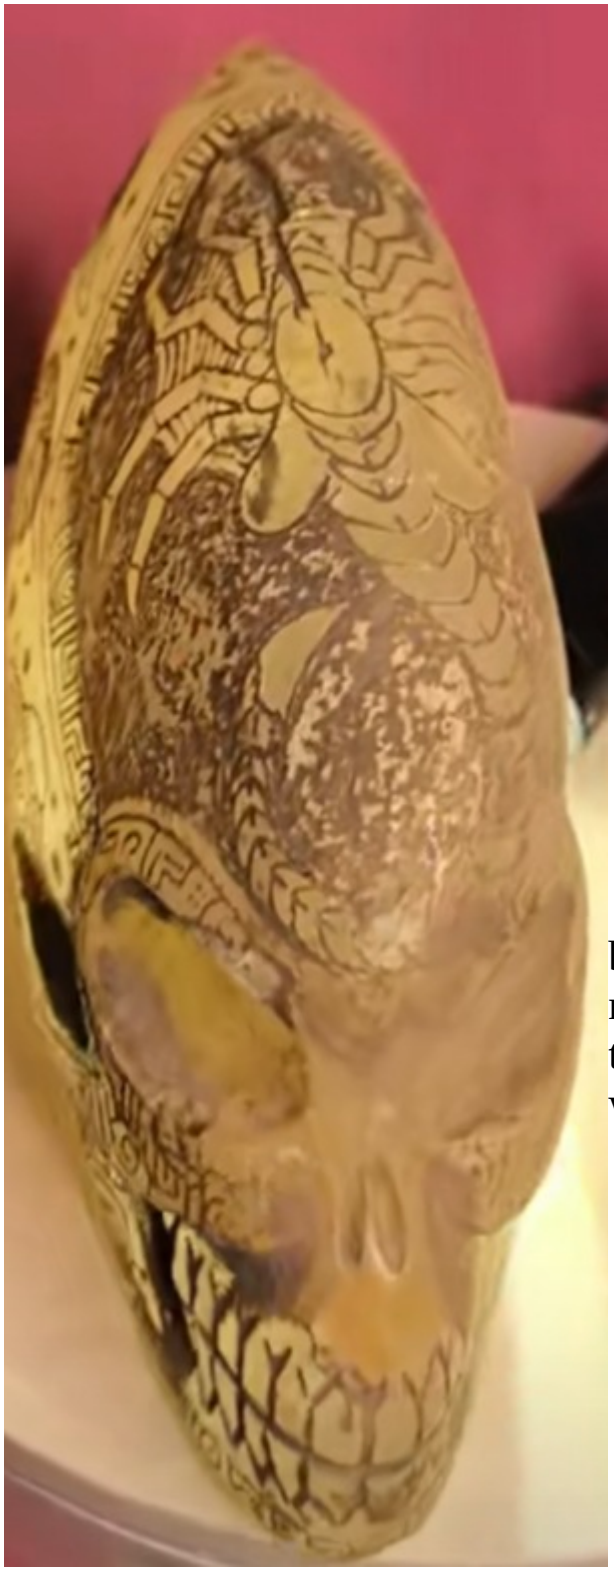
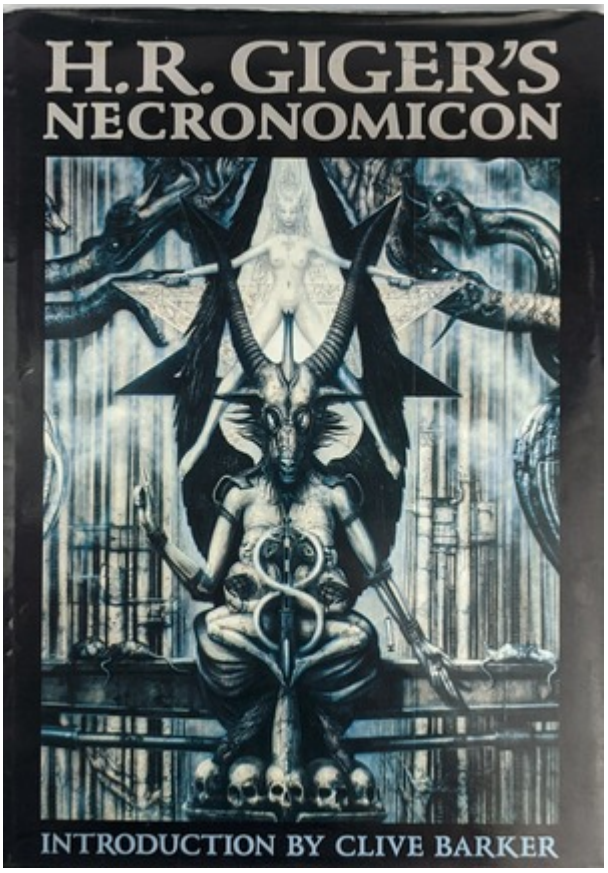
Genetic Degeneration

The children of Satan played too much with genetics and modified their bodies in extreme ways.







I know what you're thinking... and before you say anything, let me remind you that Hans Rudolf Giger, the creator of the "Alien" concept, was a Satanist.

Materials of the pieces

They come in all types, sizes, and materials. But some pieces are quite strange; they're called geopolymers. They're a mixture of many materials, and this mixture can only be created with advanced manufacturing processes. And that's not all. Some pieces have magnetic properties, others have luminescent properties and glow as if coated in fluorine. They glow green in the dark. Some pieces are even stranger because they have mechanisms inside. But it's not how you imagine. The material itself, the mixture of materials, generates magnetic fields and other types of forces. That's why some pieces react to light. Some pieces are sealed and contain rings and jewelry inside. And the strangest thing: the chemical composition of the rings shows that they are made of strange alloys. Even though the ring itself isn't that remarkable, what matters is the industrial process and the level of technology required to manufacture it.

The problem with yoga, meditation, and contact programs like Steven Greer's CE5

The thing is... you don't know the origin of Yoga. You sit down to do breathing exercises without thinking about who you might be contacting. Didn't it ever seem strange to you that in yoga you have to activate the chakras to awaken the Kundalini Serpent?

And things escalate when a group of people go to the desert to meditate and make contact with these beings. These people don't realize that by doing this they are contacting the children of Satan, and what would happen if they made contact with these evil and dangerous beings? Suddenly they're told a bunch of lies and end up founding a new religion.

The challenge of fingerprints

You see, the sons of Satan were experts in genetics, so they carved the fingerprints of their genetic creations into the stones. It's their way of saying, "Look what I'm capable of. Are you capable of doing the same?" It's a way of showing the extent of their work.

Now, you're not going to start playing with genetics. I'm just explaining what they did.

The Musical Disc

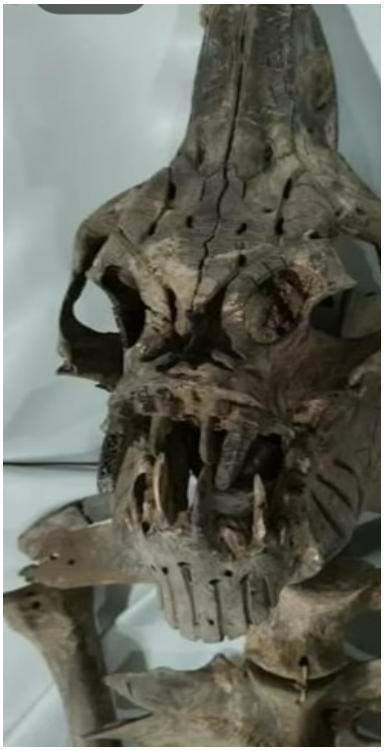
Reptilians

They are a race of hybrid beings created by the sons of Satan. In the beginning, they were warriors.



WARNING: THIS SECTION IS

FOR RELIGIOUS PEOPLE ONLY:

Do you remember that God mentioned a multi-headed dragon in Revelation? I know the dragon is a metaphor, but also keep in mind that it may be more than just a metaphor.

The perfect woman according to the Bible:

1. Courage and Excellence

The Bible describes the virtuous woman as someone of great worth, more precious than precious stones. Her character and integrity make her a trustworthy and honorable person.

2. Strength and Effort

She is hardworking, strives, and faces life with courage. She has inner strength and discipline to care for her family and fulfill her responsibilities.

3. Compassion and Service

She is generous. She lends a hand to those in need, helps others, and has a merciful attitude.

4. Wisdom and Words of Life

She speaks with prudence, kindness, and wisdom. Her words build up, never tear down. She has a moderate, measured, and kind attitude.

5. Spiritual Priority

Outward beauty is fleeting, but the fear of God—a deep relationship with Him—is what makes her admirable. Her true beauty is internal: a gentle, pure, and steadfast spirit. 6. Love, faithfulness, and care for the home

She loves her family, diligently cares for her home, and teaches the younger women to be prudent, loving, responsible, and good stewards. Her life brings peace and stability to those around her.

7. Modesty and good testimony

She dresses and conducts herself with modesty and dignity. Her way of life demonstrates good works, respect, and reverence for God.

8. Relationship with her husband

She respects, honors, and supports her husband. Her attitude contributes to the harmony of the home and shows a deep sense of unity.

9. Cooperation and purpose

She was created as a suitable helper: a companion, an ally, a complement. She walks beside man to fulfill a shared purpose, neither inferior nor superior, but designed to contribute what he lacks.

10. Exemplary Loyalty

Like Ruth, the virtuous woman is faithful, constant, and committed, even in difficult times.

11. Intelligence and Prudence

Like Abigail, the virtuous woman is wise; she knows when to speak, how to act, and how to avoid conflict. Her sound judgment is a blessing to those around her.

12. Faith, Obedience, and Surrender

Like Mary, she has a heart open to God's will. She trusts, obeys, and humbly surrenders to the divine purpose.

The perfect man according to the Bible

1. A Righteous and Steadfast Man

The virtuous man avoids the influence of evil, shuns sin, and maintains a clean path. His life is guided by sound principles and wise decisions.

2. Rooted in God

He finds pleasure in God's Word and meditates on it constantly. This gives him stability, like a tree by a river: he remains firm, fruitful, and prosperous.

3. Fear of God and Legacy

The man who fears the Lord leaves a powerful spiritual legacy for his children. He lives with justice, mercy, and righteousness, and his life illuminates others even in dark times.

4. Integrity and Testimony

He walks with integrity, and this consistency impacts his family and those around him. He is strong not only physically, but also in wisdom, self-control, and character.

5. Excellence and Diligent Work

He is dedicated, disciplined, and responsible. His efforts lead him to positions of honor. He controls his emotions better than someone who conquers a city. 6. Obedience and Purpose

He understands that the essence of man is to fear God and obey His commandments. A life of purpose is born from this relationship.

7. Active Spiritual Life

The man of God flees from evil, pursues righteousness, and lives with faith, love, patience, and gentleness. He does not give up: he fights the spiritual battle with courage.

8. Strength and Steadfastness

He remains alert, firm in his faith, and acts with courage. He lives his masculinity with responsibility and effort.

9. Responsible Father

He raises his children with love, discipline, and spiritual teaching. He does not provoke anger, but guides with patience and wisdom.

10. Loving and Sacrificial Husband

He loves his wife with devotion, patience, and honor. His leadership resembles that of Christ: protective, sacrificial, and full of love.

11. Courageous and determined

He strives, faces fear, acts with determination, and obeys God's ways. Courage is an essential part of his identity.

12. Upright at all times

Like Job, he is righteous, fears God, and turns away from evil. His integrity does not change because of circumstances.

13. Just and merciful

He practices justice, is compassionate, and walks humbly with God. He is not guided by pride, but by truth and mercy.

14. Noble and generous protector

Like Boaz, he is courageous, honorable, and a provider. He protects, respects, and acts with kindness toward others.

15. Disciplined and self-controlled

Like Paul, he masters his body and his desires. Discipline is part of his spiritual and moral life.

Passages on the virtues of women (continuous list)

Proverbs 31:10, Proverbs 31:17, Proverbs 31:20, Proverbs 31:25, Proverbs 31:26, Proverbs 14:1, Proverbs 11:16, Titus 2:3-5, 1 Peter 3:3-4, 1 Timothy 2:9-10, Ruth 1:16-17, Ruth 3:11, Song of Solomon 4:7, Luke 1:45

Passages on the virtues of men (continuous list)Micah 6:8, Psalms 1:1-3, 1 Timothy 3:2-4, Titus 1:7-8, Ephesians 5:25, Joshua 1:9, 1 Corinthians 16:13, Proverbs 20:7 Proverbs 27:17, 1 Kings 2:2-3

How to pray?

Listen to me, your vain repetitions won't save you. Praying in public will hardly get God's attention. So how can a person communicate with God?

First, you must have faith; you must have absolute certainty that what you are doing will work. Second, you must be sincere. It's not like you can lie to God, you know… Praying consists of talking to God. You can start by giving thanks or asking for forgiveness. But whatever you do, if you want to be more successful, you must pray in a private place.

How do you talk to God? As if you were talking to your father… Didn't you have a father? Well, imagine someone who loves you and is always looking out for you because He cares about you. Someone who protects you and doesn't abandon you despite your constant mistakes.

Be persistent, even persistent, be persistent. Pray several times, ask God for the same thing repeatedly, and if God doesn't grant it, ask Him why, or ask Him to give you what you need in life. Sometimes you don't need money; instead, you need to develop character and sound judgment to bear the burden of responsibilities. Sometimes you don't need a car or an apartment; instead, you need shrewdness, intelligence, and a home. What good is easy money if you can't keep it? And why would you want easy money if the risks far outweigh the rewards? Listen carefully: sooner or later, you're going to get burned. But the wisdom and prudence that come from God will accompany you and show you alternatives to solve your daily problems.

Something you should keep in mind: God hears you, He always hears you. He knows beforehand what you're going to ask for and even what you're going to do. As Isaiah said, the Creator of the eye and the ear... will He be incapable of seeing and hearing?

Sometimes you wonder why God is the way He is... and why there is so much evil in the world? God has seen the true history of humanity; God witnessed all the betrayals that humankind committed against Him in the past, and God knows the betrayals that humankind will commit against Him in the future. It's not that God doesn't act; on the contrary, God works every day trying to bring about change in people. The problem isn't with God; the problem is with you. And it's not something that will be resolved overnight. Change is a process that can take some time, but with perseverance and practice, a person can change.

What does God want from you and how can you survive the inevitable cataclysm that is approaching?

Buying land in New Zealand to dig a hole in the ground where you can bury your head and hide from God's wrath is only prolonging the problem. Billionaires think that building secret underground bunkers is how they'll survive the end of the world. But sooner or later, whether you're a billionaire or poor, the reality is that you're going to die. That's the reality (for many).

God left some very clear instructions. You simply have to have a relationship with God and help widows and orphans. That's all.

Do you want to escape the day of the Lord? Then help the spirit of God that dwells in the bodies of the most needy. Give charity to the poor.

While it's true that no one will be saved by their works, it's also true that faith without works is dead.

Psalm 41: “Blessed is the one who considers the poor; the Lord will deliver him in the day of trouble. The Lord will protect him and preserve his life.”

Now there are many people who want to be taken up in the rapture, but these people are thinking about escaping disaster and not about developing a genuine relationship with God.

The first question would be:
Have you reviewed your holy scriptures?

When was the last time you examined your sacred scriptures with a magnifying glass and dictionary in hand?

Furthermore, I have an exercise for you: Have you ever examined your scriptures as if you were a skeptic?

Are you able to find the contradictions and errors in your sacred scriptures?

Do you trust the person who wrote them? Do you trust their intentions?

I have examined my sacred scriptures. In fact, I've examined them so thoroughly that I can tell you what their main problems are.

For example, there is a part of the Old Testament that states:

• How did the Philistines manage to take the Ark of the Covenant into the house/temple of Dagon in 1 Samuel 5, if Numbers 4:15 and 1 Chronicles 15 state that only the Levites could touch the Ark and that no one should touch it because it was holy and anyone who touched it could die?

• In the New Testament, the genealogies of Jesus are different depending on the Gospel you read. Matthew 1:1-17; Luke 3:23-38 (this may be due to translation errors)

• God says that children will not pay for the sins of their parents, but He also says that He punishes those who hate Him for up to three generations… Exodus 20:5, Exodus 34:7

• They say that Christ cannot be crucified again in Romans 6:9-10, Hebrews 10:12, 1 Peter 3:18; however, Revelation 11:8 says that Jesus was also crucified in (Egypt?)… this is a great mystery or simply an error of interpretation… I don't know… I leave that question for the reader.

There are other, more serious underlying problems than those mentioned above, and I'm sure these problems can also happen to you:

Problem number 1. My Holy Scriptures have been translated into many languages, which is why they have various versions, and each version changes the words slightly. (Which could alter the original message.)

Problem number 2. My sacred scriptures were written in ancient languages, and for that reason, the translators had to change the words to make them more meaningful (which could alter the original message.)

Problem number 3. My sacred scriptures were forbidden to the general public. Only those with high positions within the priestly or political hierarchy had access to them.

Problem number 4. My sacred scriptures were altered. (In the King James Version of the Old Testament, verbs in chapter 10 of the book of the prophet Ezekiel were changed, which can lead to the loss of the original text's description.)

Be patient; I'm going to give you all the answers to all your questions about the secrets of this world, but first, I'm going to explain how I found the answers.

The first thing I'm going to tell you is that… you don't understand the Bible. You think you do… but you don't. Furthermore, you may have a very vague and general idea of what the Bible is. You think you understand it, and you may know a verse or two, and you may even understand a little of its chronology. But the truth is, you don't know what the Bible is about. And I understand. I'm not criticizing you. I understand you.

How could you know what the Bible is about if so many of its words are so convoluted, outdated, and rarely used? How could you understand the Bible if the texts have been poorly translated, there are different versions of the texts, new texts are constantly being released that are increasingly distant from the original text, and each one has its own interpretations? And to top it all off, how could you understand the Bible if entire chapters have been censored and key words have been changed to hinder your understanding?

That's why today I'm going to explain what the Bible is really about.

THE BIBLE IS A BOOK ABOUT GENETICS

The faster you integrate the concept of DNA genetics into your interpretation of the Bible, the faster you'll be able to solve it, and the faster you'll feel bad about the bitter pill that's coming your way.

WE ARE UNFORTUNATE

And very unfortunate indeed, because the most important book in the Bible is Genesis, and yet, to make matters worse, it's also the most difficult to understand. How is it possible that the most important book is simultaneously the most incomprehensible of all? Nobody understands Genesis. What's more, they don't know what it's about, or what its consequences are. They understand nothing.

What is Genesis really about?

It's the story of an all-powerful being who strove to create something. The key word is STRIVED (AND VERY MUCH).

He strove so much that in the end, he had to rest. What many people don't understand is that God could have created a mediocre world, or a standard world, but instead, he chose to create a world of the highest possible quality. Basically, he made a maximum effort to build something that would last forever.

Has anyone ever ruined your work? Has anyone ever betrayed you? Have you ever built your house and watched as tenants destroy the house you built with SO MUCH EFFORT?

What would you do if your son was the one who destroyed everything?

THE MOST IMPORTANT VERSE IN THE BIBLE THAT NO ONE UNDERSTANDS

The following verse is poorly translated, has different versions (depending on the Bible version you read), and is the verse that explains the entire Bible, explains the world you live in, and is the most ignored verse in the entire Bible. Many have never read it or even know it exists, and even if they did, they wouldn't understand it because in most Bibles this verse is written in an ancient language (I had to use a dictionary to understand it back in the days before the internet).

SECRET #1: GOD STARTED THE FIRST WAR IN THE WORLD AS PUNISHMENT FOR MEN AND SERPENTS.

It's true, when God saw what Adam, Eve, and the Serpent did, God was very angry. Extremely annoying. Really annoying.

The punishments

Adam (Man) was sentenced to work, to die, and to turn into dust (something very important that you also don't understand).

Eve/Java (Woman) was sentenced to bear children in pain and to have man as the master of her (sexual?) desire, so that man would dominate her (control her). (I've discussed and tried to explain this to women, and let me tell you, women don't understand all the consequences this concept implies... it's strange).

The serpent (the animal/cherub) was the one he punished the harshest…

• He sentenced it to crawl on its belly (which means that before that moment the serpent didn't crawl… and if it didn't crawl… did it walk??)

• Then he told it that it would be the most cursed animal of all that exist (we can't fully comprehend how much bad luck this living being had to endure… but it must have been, and still is, something very bad).

• Then he sentenced it to eat dust every day of its life.

And then the part no one understands… Please read Genesis chapter 3, verse 15.

• Then he told him that he would have children and that his children would wage war against the children of men.

Let me tell you something… you haven't understood “this,” and you've never made the following deduction either.

I've read the comments on my videos, and I've seen how many of you say things like… “But Satan can't have children,” “But Satan is a fallen angel, and angels can't have children.”

And the truth is that Satan had children, many children, more than you can imagine, and God wasn't playing around when He said that the children of Satan would wage war against the children of men.

You don't believe me, do you? >_> Well, take a dictionary or look up different versions of the Bible online and read… read Genesis chapter 3, verse 15.

And I want you to keep this in mind: “The great dragon was hurled down—that ancient serpent called the devil, or Satan, who leads the whole world astray. He was hurled to the earth, and his angels with him.” Revelation 12:9. Keep in mind that God refers to him as a dragon, but also describes him as a serpent, and emphasizes saying:

“He leads the whole world astray.” That's true. I'll explain more about dragons and serpents later.

But for now, I wanted to establish that the serpent in Genesis is the same one in Revelation.

NOW GET READY FOR A CONNECTION YOUR MIND HAS NEVER MADE BEFORE

Do you remember when I mentioned each of the punishments? Do you remember when I mentioned that Adam had to die? Something like… “because you were taken from dust, for dust you are and to dust you shall return”?

And do you remember that God said to the serpent... something like... "You will crawl on your belly and eat dust ALL THE DAYS OF YOUR LIFE?"

SECOND GREAT TRUTH

If you are reading this and you are a "human" being, let me tell you something... you are not at the top of the food chain. In fact, if it weren't a chain but a pyramid, you wouldn't be at the top, but below it.

Are you telling me that the children of Satan are at the top of the food chain? Yes... and no... it's not that they eat human flesh, although they have done so at times, but rather, their divine punishment is that they must eat the remains of their enemies, which in this case are us.

YOU HAVE A PROBLEM WITH THE HOLY SCRIPTURES AND WITH YOUR WAY OF SEEING THE HOLY SCRIPTURES AND WITH THE WAY YOU SEE... SATAN.

You'll see that for 99.9% of people who have reviewed the Bible (Old or New Testament), it has become a science fiction book, a fantasy full of metaphors and ancient tales whose only value lies in explaining the world, establishing laws, and offering life lessons. Nowadays, and especially among young people, the Bible is a book that cannot be taken as historical fact. If you tell a young person that the Bible is a historical book, they will surely laugh in your face.

They will tell you that science has already proven the dating of the Earth with tests like carbon-14 dating, and that the Big Bang theory and Steven Hawking's postulates on gravity can easily explain the origin of the four fundamental forces that sustain the world (electromagnetism, the strong nuclear force, the weak nuclear force, and gravity). They will tell you that archaeology disproves the Bible and that the simple fact that so many cultures exist with such Various religions make your Bible just one more text in a vast sea of religious texts.

I'll say it again, you don't understand the Bible. You can't even begin to imagine what it's about, or the context of the stories within it. You understand nothing about ancient Egypt, and you understand absolutely nothing about Satan.

What is and what isn't Satan?

Alright, let's get this over with. Let's start with what Satan is NOT.

1) Satan is not a human being. Although he could take on a human form with great effort, the truth is that he is not human. Furthermore, in his original, basic state, he did not have, nor does he have, a human body, a human silhouette, or human skin color. HE DOES NOT HAVE A HUMAN FORM.

2) Satan does not have the form of an angel. At least, he doesn't have the form of the typical angel (a silhouette of a man with wings on his back). Yes, it's true, with great effort he could take on a similar form, but in his basic state, HE DOES NOT HAVE AN ANGELIC, MEDIEVAL-STYLE FORM. Get those ideas out of your head!

3) Satan doesn't look like a handsome man. He doesn't resemble Brad Pitt, Henry Cavill, or a supermodel. While he might appear beautiful (in his design and functionality), that doesn't mean Satan is a beautiful human being. Although he could take that form with great effort, in his base state, Satan DOES NOT HAVE A HUMAN FORM.

4) Most importantly... SATAN IS NOT A SNAKE. He's not the typical snake you see on the Discovery Channel. He's not a cobra, he's not a python. He's not a small snake. ...GET THIS THROUGH YOUR HEAD: SATAN IS NOT A SNAKE.

So, WHAT IS Satan??????????????????????????????????

According to the Bible...: He is the MOST intelligent of all animals... THE MOST INTELLIGENT... Do you think your dog is brilliant? Do you think your cat understands you? Don't you think it's great that parakeets can talk? What about elephants? Did you know they have incredible memories?

WELL, SATAN IS ABOVE ALL ANIMALS…

He is more intelligent than an orca, more intelligent than a dolphin, more intelligent than an octopus, a squid, a chimpanzee, or a gorilla.

He is so intelligent that he can speak, reason, argue, and convince. He has a gift for tactics and strategy. He can plan long-term. He can reproduce.

But he is not just a serpent; Satan is also an angelic being. In Ezekiel 28, he is described as an angel of the Cherubim rank, and this Cherubim had a simple mission: to protect creation.

To be a guardian angel, God gave him great knowledge so he would understand how the systems governing creation worked (the laws of physics). God made him a being with enough information so he could make independent decisions and correct problems or errors should any arise.

I know what you're thinking… How is it possible for a problem or error to occur in a perfect creation made by an all-powerful and perfect being? My answer is that you'd better ask God that. I suspect it's related to free will.

Mysteries… mysteries and more mysteries…

If Satan was a serpent (not a snake, a python, or the typical animal that comes to mind when you think of a snake)

if Satan was a serpent, why does God refer to Satan as a dragon? Think about it.

Think carefully about it because in your mind, a snake looks one way and a dragon looks another. In fact, they are two different things in your mind.

And not only that... in your perception of Satan, you might imagine him as an angel... a very handsome man with white skin, blond hair, a pair of wings on his back, and a halo on his head...

Tell me...

How can a blond-haired angel turn into a red (scarlet) dragon with 10 heads?

(But the 10 heads represent 10 kings, and it was a metaphor… I know… but you don't understand…)

How do we go from an angelic being to something completely different that looks more like a dinosaur with wings?

…That's what I'm asking you.

So, what is the Bible really about?

Generally speaking, the Bible is a story about the relationship between God and his creations.

But at its core, the Bible is a story of a secret war between humans and serpents, a war that God provoked to punish both humans and serpents.

Okay… let's suppose I believe you? And what does that have to do with genetics or everything you claim to know…?

The answer is… everything! Absolutely everything, because even if you don't believe anything I'm going to explain in this book. The undeniable truth is that the study of genetics holds all the answers to the origin and future of humankind. Everything is in the DNA, and it doesn't matter if you believe it or not. It doesn't matter your religion, your philosophy, your origin, whether you are poor or rich, whether you are a citizen or a foreigner, tall or short, male or female, child or elderly. In the end, none of that matters. In your genetic code, you will find the truth.

See the Bible with new eyes

Now that you know it all has to do with genetics, you can start reading the Bible with new eyes. Go to Genesis chapter 6, verse 9: “These are the generations of Noah: Noah was a righteous man, blameless in his generations; Noah walked with God.”

Go to a dictionary and look up the word “generation.” You think you know the meaning of the word generation… but you don’t…

From the Royal Spanish Academy (https://dle.rae.es/generación)

Generation: f. Succession of descendants in a direct line. Caste, genus, or species. f. The act and effect of begetting (‖ giving life to a new being).

Didn’t you ever find it strange and tedious to read things like chapter 5 of Genesis?

3 And Adam lived 130 years, and begot a son in his own likeness, after his image, and called his name Seth. 4 And the days of Adam after he begot Seth were 800 years, and he begot sons and daughters. 5 And all the days that Adam lived were 930 years; and he died. 6 Seth lived 105 years, and begot Enosh. 7 And Seth lived after he begot Enosh 807 years, and begot sons and daughters. 8 And all the days of Seth were 912 years; and he died.
9 Enosh lived 90 years, and begot Kenan. 10 And Enosh lived after he begot Kenan 815 years, and begot sons and daughters. 11 And all the days of Enosh were 905 years; and He died.

12 Cainan lived seventy years and fathered Mahalaleel. 13 After he fathered Mahalaleel, Cainan lived eight hundred and forty years and had other sons and daughters. 14 All the days of Cainan were nine hundred and ten years, and he died.

15 Mahalaleel lived sixty-five years and fathered Jared. 16 After he fathered Jared, Mahalaleel lived eight hundred and thirty years and had other sons and daughters. 17 All the days of Mahalaleel were eight hundred and ninety-five years, and he died.

Parents, generations, lineages, descendants... all of that is very important because the Bible is a book about genetics.

Now ask yourself this question: God says that Noah was perfect in all his generations, meaning that Noah had perfect genetics... then He says something like, “And God saw the earth, and, behold, it was corrupt; for all flesh had corrupted its way upon the earth.” (King James Version)

How can all flesh corrupt its way?...

“When the sons of God saw that the daughters of men were beautiful, they took wives for themselves of all whom they chose.”

“There were Nephilim in the earth in those days, and also afterward, when the sons of God came to the daughters of men, and they bore children to them.”

Which sons of God is He talking about? Is He talking about angels? Aren't angels supposed to be unable to have children? Hahaha!

Okay, fine... let's suppose that men, women, and angels (or maybe they weren't angels, who knows...) became corrupt, but try to answer this question...

“Then the Lord said, ‘I will blot out mankind, whom I have created, from the face of the earth—and with them animals, reptiles, and birds—for I regret that I have made them.’”

I understand that God wants to destroy men... but why also destroy the animals, the reptiles, and even the birds of the air? Aren't animals supposed to be innocent living beings in all this madness? Or is there something more to it...?

Perhaps God is telling us the truth when He said, “because all flesh had corrupted its way on the earth.”

And what if the genetics of animals were also corrupted?

I understand that before the flood, God described men as beings who only had evil thoughts in their hearts, and that this was a reason to destroy them all, but you understand me: why destroy the animals too?

You need to look into things more thoroughly. Yes, nowadays the theory of giants and Nephilim and all that stuff you see on the internet or on television, all that's fine, but look into things more deeply.

For example, from Adam to Noah there are 8125 years (or so I believe, haha). Does that mean that from Adam to Noah, 8125 years passed in war with the sons of Satan? Or at least thousands of years passed… at least a few thousand…

See how important it is to read between the lines…

During those 8125 years of war… between the sons of men against the sons of the serpent, the cherubim… what do you think happened?…

Because everything became corrupted… Men, women, reptiles, even birds… everything became corrupted. Who was responsible for corrupting everything? Was it us men… or was it the women, or the angels of heaven? Or the sons of Satan?

Have you ever considered that Satan is also a son of God? Have you considered that if Satan is a cherub, his sons are also cherubim?

Where does it say that Satan is a cherub?

Ezekiel 28 “Son of man, take up a lament concerning the king of Tyre, and say to him, ‘Thus says the Lord GOD: You are the seal of perfection, full of wisdom and perfect in beauty.
13 You were in Eden, the garden of God; every precious stone adorned you: sardius, topaz, diamond, chrysolite, onyx, and beryl, sapphire, carbuncle, and emerald; your settings and mountings were made of gold, prepared for you on the day you were created.
14 You were the anointed cherub who covers, and I placed you there; you were on the holy mountain of God; you walked among the fiery stones.
15 You were blameless in all your ways from the day you were created till wickedness was found in you.
16 Through your abundant trade you were filled with iniquity, and you sinned: therefore I cast you out of the mountain of God, and I destroyed you, O covering cherub, from among the stones of fire.

17 Your heart became proud because of your beauty; you corrupted your wisdom for the sake of your splendor. So I cast you to the ground; I exposed you before kings, that they might gaze at you.

18 By the multitude of your sins and the wickedness of your trade you defiled your sanctuaries. So I brought fire from your midst, and it consumed you, and I reduced you to ashes on the earth in the sight of all who were watching.

Let's think for a moment... Who was in Eden? The king of Tyre? Hahaha. Do you think the king of Tyre was a human being? Impossible! So who was in Eden... a Cherub? Yes, a Cherub, and not just any Cherub... but one FULL OF WISDOM.

Now, I'm aware that the reader might say that Ezekiel 28 is talking about a Cherub and not about the serpent Satan, and let me tell you something... I agree with you. But later I'll explain the mystery of the Cherubim.

Okay, let's get back to it.

Do you think it's possible for a Cherub Angel full of wisdom... do you think it's possible for this angel full of evil? I don't know... maybe... he's capable of altering the genetics of men, women, reptiles, beasts, birds... I don't know... it's a possibility.

If I know - I know... the text is talking about giants, and the sons of God who went to the daughters of men and blah blah blah...

(By the way, have you ever considered the possibility that the sons of God... Satan being a son of God and having sons... well, you know... maybe the sons of Satan are also considered sons of God, and that these sons of Satan are the ones having relations with women?).

Furthermore, examine it more deeply... in your medieval worldview, the sons of God must be perfect angels with white skin and blond hair. But if they are sons of God, they should be incorruptible; therefore, for these sons of God to have relations with women, they must be evil angels...

Because a "white-skinned, blond-haired, incorruptible son of God" angel would never have sexual relations with women... however, a corrupt angel would... Perhaps a corrupt cherub would be capable of having them. Sexual relations with a woman…

Okay, let's forget about that for a moment and move on to the next question…

Who corrupted the birds and reptiles, and how did they become corrupted?

Let's continue talking about genetics. You've probably noticed that many of the dog breeds that exist today were created by us humans. We "humans" have successfully crossbred different dog breeds. We've also managed to graft and crossbreed some plants, like grapefruit and orange. And that's despite our scientific knowledge being, at best, a farce full of shortcomings and absurdities.

If we, who don't even know where we stand with our limited understanding of the laws of physics, can achieve this, imagine what a Cherub full of wisdom could accomplish...

If this Cherub were to set out to crossbreed animals, humans, plants... birds... Imagine what he could do...

"because all flesh had corrupted its way on the earth."

A few final details to consider before we close this chapter. The New Testament says that "with the Lord a day is like a thousand years, and a thousand years are like a day" (2 Peter 3:8).

And Psalm 90:4 from the Old Testament says, "For a thousand years in your sight are like a day that has just gone by."

Do you remember that God created the world in 6 days? What if it took God 6,000 years to create the world? What if it took God 1,000 years to design the human body? Wouldn't you be upset if someone came along and ruined your 6,000-year work?

I know you must be tired of so much information, so let me tell you what we're going to see in this book… we're going to see Exodus with new eyes… we're going to understand what the New Testament is really about… what the gospel truly is, what the Book of Revelation is really about.

We're going to see the secret history of the children of Satan. We're going to explore the secret history of this world, the true secrets of Freemasonry, the secrets that even Freemasons don't understand about the symbols that surround them. We're going to examine the current state of this world. We're going to see what tools are available to you (prayers, angels, knowledge like Isaiah).

And we're going to see why, in the end, you shouldn't worry about anything, not even making a fool of yourself.

If God wanted to, He would have already fixed this world. An all-powerful God has the ability to fix this world in the blink of an eye. So the question is... why does God allow pain and suffering in this world?

If God is such a good God... why does He allow such bad things to happen to such good people around Him?

Answer: There is no such thing as a good human being; we are all traitors, descendants of traitors...

The New Testament calls Adam and Eve transgressors. The Bible says that every man is a liar.

Basically, God allows evil in the world because men have constantly betrayed God. They betrayed Him when:

- They partook of the fruit of knowledge in the Garden of Eden
- When women had relations with the “sons of God,” the Cherubim
- When Cain shed Abel’s blood
- When they killed the prophets God sent
- When they killed the Son of God
- When they denied the Son of God
- and the list goes on and on.

Because of all those betrayals and because humanity strayed from its genetic path, God set apart the descendants of Abraham and separated them from the rest of humanity. The rest of humanity chose to worship the hybrids created by Satan and his offspring (although the Bible says the Gentiles were allowed to worship the heavenly hosts). Be that as it may, you only have to look at the ancient gods of various cultures and you'll realize that most of them were hybrids, half human, half animal. And don't tell me Zeus doesn't fall into that category. Don't you remember that Zeus could shapeshift and transformed into a swan and a bull to impregnate women? And that the children born to Zeus weren't ordinary, but rather "demigods"?

People don't understand that everything is related to genetics. You've probably read the Book of Revelation, the part that says: “The locusts looked like horses prepared for battle. On their heads they wore something like crowns of gold, and their faces resembled human faces. Their hair was like women's hair, and their teeth were like lions' teeth. They wore breastplates like breastplates of iron, and the sound of their wings was like the roar of many chariots rushing into battle. They had tails with stings like scorpions, and in their tails they had power to torment people for five months.”

At first glance, it seems like a mythological creature, but as I've told you several times, mythology is a lie to cover up the fact that Satan mixed human DNA with animal DNA. He also mixed animal DNA with the DNA of other animals, and even plant DNA with animal DNA.

Once you realize that everything is related to genetics, you can see the Bible in a new light. For example:

“This is how I saw the horses and their riders in my vision. They wore breastplates of fiery red, sapphire, and sulfur. The heads of the horses were like the heads of lions, and out of their mouths came fire, smoke, and sulfur. 18 A third of mankind was killed by these three plagues—by the fire, smoke, and sulfur that came out of their mouths. 19 The power of the horses was in their mouths and in their tails; their tails were like serpents with heads, and they inflicted harm with them.”

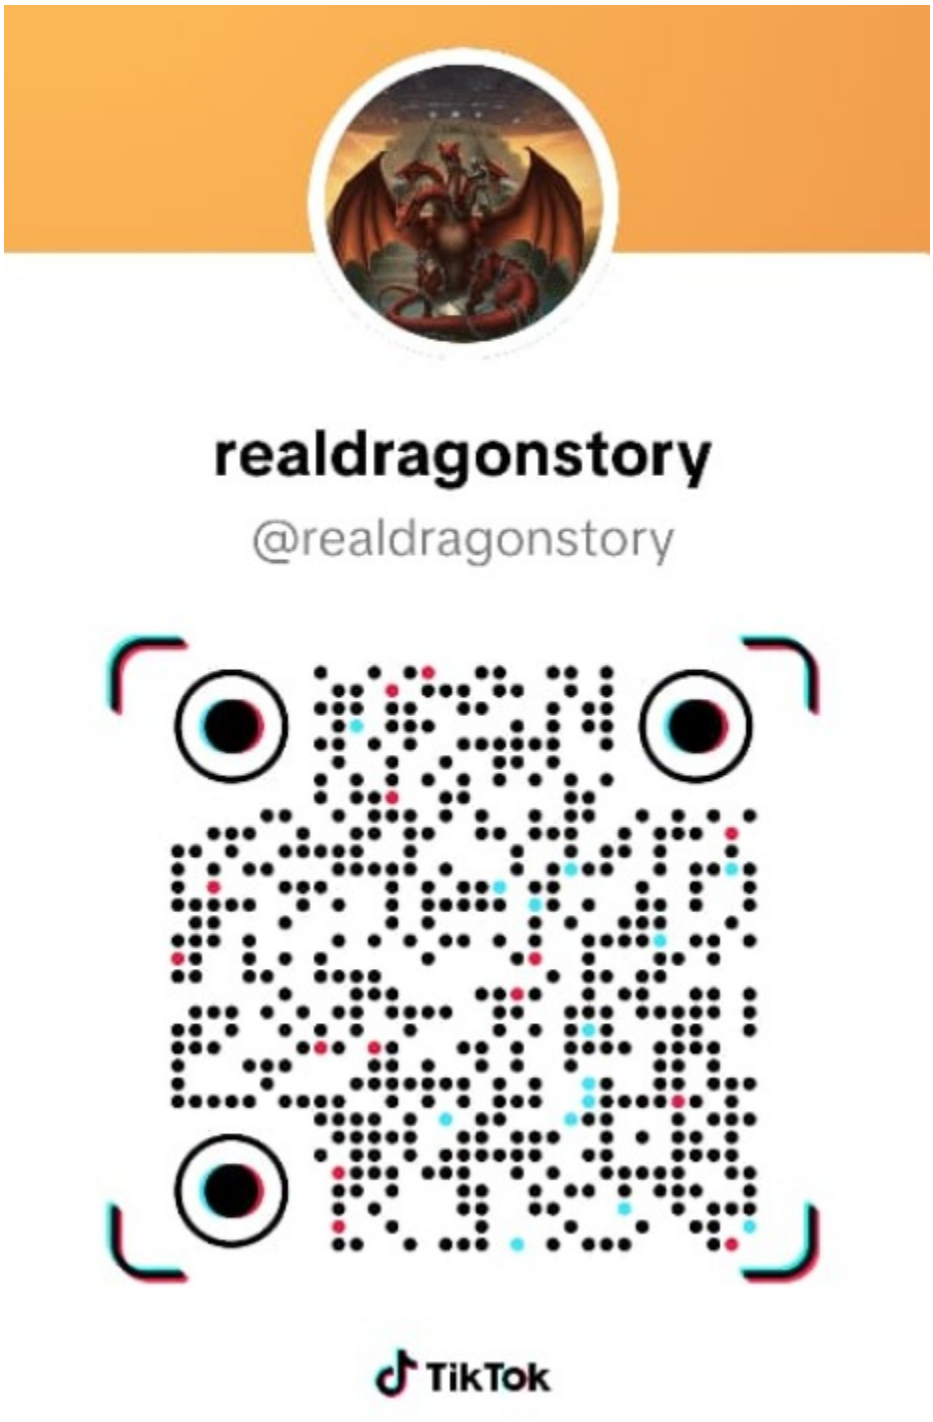
It sounds like a far-fetched description... but it's not! If Satan knows about genetics, what makes you think God doesn't? Can't you see? THIS IS A WAR OF GENETISTS!

On one side you have Satan and his genetic creations, and on the other side you have God with the beings He created to punish humanity. And caught in the middle of this conflict between God and Satan are humankind.

The use of masks

Many masks have been found, and the message may relate to a change of identity or assuming a new role. Or perhaps to hiding one's true identity.

There are many depictions of the Virgin Mary in Mexican art. One reason could be that she has tried to save both men and cherubs. (This is my own speculation.) I may be right, or I may be wrong. But it could explain why the Virgin appears in so many Mexican carvings. I suspect that the ancient Mexica didn't understand who she was, and many stories were invented around her.



Hey, take it easy, at the end of the day it's just a set of hypotheses, it's a story.
